the fight against the pressuring of refugees, Msgr. Swanstrom said, the usual avenue for com plaint against such tactics was the office of the High Commissioner for Refugees maintained in Geneva by the United Nations. The Monsignor said that virtually no cases went to the office because it was difficult to prepare cases with the necessary documentary material required by the Geneva office. The Monsignor said cases of forcible abduction and repatria tion of refugees thave been known, but it was virtually impossible to substantiate them with the required legalistic trimmings for prosecution.

IN RECENT months, protests against the communist pressure tactics came from the Interna-tional Rescue Committee, of which Angler Biddle Duke is president. The organization has headquarters in New York.

Gen. William J. Donovan, But falo, N. Y., lawyer and widely known Catholic layman who is chairman of the committee's emergency commission, has been made the head of a group to protect Iron Curtain refugees from being coerced to return to their native lands.

Gen. Donovan, who was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor in World War I when he served with New York's famothe "Fighting 69th" and was chief of the Office of Strategic Services in World War II, declared:

"The full weight of welfare agencies, private and governmental organizations working in the refugee and immigration fields must be brought to bear on the development of effective measures to make sure that no refugee shall be returned against his
