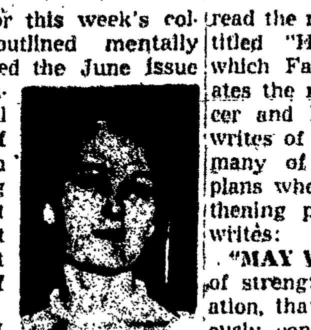
AMONG WOMEN

Strengthening Parish Groups

By Mary Lennon Snyder

My plans for this week's column were outlined mentally when I received the June issue "The Counsellor". As usual I find myself delighted with its stimulating contents, yet regretful that it does not reach more of our women. This issue I found particularly good in that it presents so many facets of the Diocesan Council work.



Mrs. Snyder

For example on page two I read the moderator's message entitled "Hail and Farewell" in which Father McMannus delineates the role of the retiring officer and her successor. He also writes of an event toward which many of us should focus our plans when in discussing strengthening parish organizations he writes:

"MAY WE suggest, as a means of strengthening a parish affiliation, that the parish group seriously consider the feasibility of sending a delegate to the National Convention in Chicago in November. Every affiliation, you will recall, is entitled to one accredited delegate. The expense involved, whether all or part is borne by the group, will represent an excellent investment in the future success of the parish organization, if the selection of the delegate is wisely made.

"One who has herself caught something of the stirring charges that a national convention makes to every woman, who has learned of the means, proper to women, which are best calculated to advance the cause of Christ and His Church in our day, cannot fail to aquaint and inspire her own parish organization with the mature role that it can play."

CHICAGO IS not so far distant that the transportation costs present an insurmountable difficulty to the average organization. Plans can be considered during the summer months whereby money may be available with which to send a delegate to the national Convention.

Then on page 3 the editor, Mrs. Frank T. Curtin, further stimulates our thinking along Diocesan Council lines when she reminds us that if National Council of Catholic Women, organized by the Bishops of the United States to integrate and carry forward the work of Catholic Action, is to be effective it must not be limited to special grounds or to certain areas.

Addressing herself to those who know the great role and of the National Council, whom she designates a "sales force" she queries "Are we apprising" every altar and rosary society, every parish or interparochial organization, home and school associations, and Catholic Alumnae groups, of: 1 Their power to mold public opinion, 2. Their duty to the Church and community; 3. Their responsibility toward spreading the Mystical Body of Christ?

"ARE WE informing Catholic groups of: 1. The aims and objectives of N.C.C.W; 2 The benefits derived from affiliation with the National Council; 3. The power of "united action."

Mrs. Curtin exhorts her readers, declaring, "This is June, the month of the Sacred Heart. Let us pray fervently that we may so love the Sacred Heart that we may become powerful instruments radiating Christ, that we may understand our role today in the restoration of the world to Christ and play it well, that we may become beacons to draw every woman in our diocese into the active lay apostolate united in the Rochester Diocesan Council of Catholic Women of the N.C.C.W. Let us work with enthusiasm, zeal, and delight."

You can understand why I say the June issue of The Counsellor is stimulating.

Teaching Profession Claims 40% Of Nazareth College Graduates

The teaching profession will claim the greatest number of this year's Nazareth College graduates. Thirty two members of the class, about 40%, are planning to teach, more than half of them in Rochester and the suburban area schools. Almost half of them will teach in elementary schools, the others in junior and senior high schools.

Frances Fraser and Mary Lillian Greco have signed contracts to teach in Roseville, Michigan, a suburb of Detroit; Arline Costigan, plans to take a position in Dayton, Ohio, and Shirley Abberton in Massachusetts. Most of the others will teach in or near their homes.

Nursing and Business and Industry account for the next largest number--19 and 15 respectively. Two of the nurses, Geraldine Africano and Loretta Rae have accepted positions at St. Francis Hospital, Miami Beach, Florida; Maureen Regan, Kathryn Weiman, and Joanne Knuth will work in Brooklyn, Maureen and Joanne in pediatrics and Kathryn with the Visiting Nurse Association.

Sara Edmund has accepted a position as Assistant Clinical Instructor at the Highland Hospital; Mary Ellen Mooney will be in the operating room at the F. F. Thompson Memorial Hospital in Canandaigua; other nursing graduates will be in the various Rochester hospitals. Barbara Hayden will be the nurse at the Newark State School and Mary FitzGibbon will be the nurse at Camp Hollis, near Oswego, her home town.

Positions in business and industry taken by the Nazareth graduates range from secretarial positions, advertising assistants and telephone service representatives to mathematical technicians, chemists and draftsmen. Miss Margaret Baumgartner, a mathematics major is one of the first women to be employed by the Cornell Laboratories in Buffalo in a professional math. position and Miss Joan Wittman, likewise, is one of the pioneer women drafting employees to be hired by the Consolidated Electro-Dynamics Corp.

A number of the science majors, including the Medical Technologists, Joanne Morris, Joan Meyers, and Mary Ann Reina, will work in the area hospitals, either as technicians or in biological research.

Two of the Sociology majors have accepted positions in Medical Social Work — Jacqueline Haubner at the Rochester General Hospital and Jean Casella at the Genesee Hospital. Several of the others will be in the Child Placement Division of Monroe County Department of Social Welfare.

Four members of the class will continue their education, in addition to the prospective elementary teachers, who will begin work on their master's degrees in education at one of the State Teachers Colleges. Mary Lee Bishop will study in the graduate department of classical languages at Cornell University; Margaret Frisch and Mary Lynn McGowan in the department of physical chemistry at the university of Wisconsin and Julia Galley at Cornell in the department of education.

At least one member of the class, possibly two, is planning to work with the Central Intelligence Unit in Washington, D.C.

Cap And Gown Hoodlums

Steubenville — (NC) — College students who participate in "girl-dormitory raids, student campus riots, battling with police and the wanton destruction of property" were characterized as "hoodlums in cap and gown" by Bishop John K. Mussio of Steubenville, Ohio.

Speaking to graduates of the College of Steubenville the prelate said that there are three types of students who should not be in college and universities today. They are those students who prefer college to earning a living, those who do not have anything better to do, and those who attend because of family pressure.

Unless a student really wants to put in the hard work which "is the only key to success . . . his presence there is a fraudulent use of time." Bishop Mussio stated.
