'Storm Center' Film 'Warped' In Views

New York — (NC) — The National Legion of Decency's recent action in placing the movie, "Storm Center," in a separate classification does not mean the film is condemned.

Rather, past use of this classification shows that the Legion deems the film to be one which moviegoers should approach with their guard up.

THE USE of such a classification is unusual. The Legion has placed films in it only six previous times. Use of it in this instance led the Motion Picture Industry Council in Hollywood to accuse the legion of "a form of censorship with the purpose of dictating and controlling the content of motion pictures, contrary to American principles of freedom of thought and expression."

The council, a federation founded in 1949 and composed of 11 organizations involved in the production branch of the industry, said it does not question the legion's right "to offer moral and religion leadership."

But the Hollywood group said it thought the treatment of "Storm Center" goes "far beyond moral criticism and spiritual advice." The federation said it does not approve or disapprove of the film itself.

In applying its unusual rating of a separate classification, the Legion said of the film:

"The highly propagandistic nature of this controversial film (book burning, anti-communism, civil liberties) offers a warped, oversimplified and strongly emotional solution of a complex problem of American life. Its specious arguments tend seriously to be misleading and misrepresentative by reason of an inept and distorted presentation."

The movie tells the story of a small-town librarian who fights an attempt by the town council to have a communist book removed from the library shelves. She argues that people who read it might be helped to see through communism.

This character argues that the real danger to America is not communism, but any limitation of freedom to read whatever one chooses. Critics have termed this a confusion of liberty with unrestricted license.

THE LEGION'S classification of the film is an indication the organization thinks the movie should be approached with caution and an awareness of the sort of arguments presented in it.

Work Of Catholic Journal To Feature Radio Program

Washington — (NC) — The function of a Catholic journal of opinion, as explained by staff members of America magazine, a weekly review edited by a group of Jesuit Fathers, will be the August feature of "The Catholic Hour" radio program.

This was announced here by the National Council of Catholic Men, which produces the program over the NBC radio network every Sunday afternoon from 2:30 to 3 p.m., EDT on WHEC in the Rochester area.

THE FOUR programs in August will be opened by Father Thurston Davis, S.J., editor-in-chief of America. He will discuss the review's editorial approach, based on the social encyclicals.

Subsequent broadcasts will feature interviews with Father Benjamin Masse, S.J., speaking on economics; Father Vincent Kearney, S.J., on social problems in the Near and Far East, and Father Harold C. Gardiner, S.J., on the contemporary novel.

Each of the American writers will be interviewed by laymen familiar with the subject of the program. George K. Hunton, editor of the Catholic Interracial Review, will interview Father Davis.

Dr. John Tsu, professor at Duquesne University, will interview Father Kearney. Robert Dixson, director of Overseas Operations for Johnson and Johnson, a medical supply firm, will interview Father Masse. Dr. Francis C. Connolly, professor at Fordham University, will interview Father Gardiner.
