Corning Resident Composes Lyrics For Nuns' Musical Farce At NDU

Corning—Lyrics of the musical farce, "The Complaining Angel," presented by nuns going to summer school at the University of Notre Dame were written by John Tumpane of Corning, a member of the Notre Dame faculty and music was by Dudley Birder of St. Francis Xavier University, Antigonish, Nova Scotia.

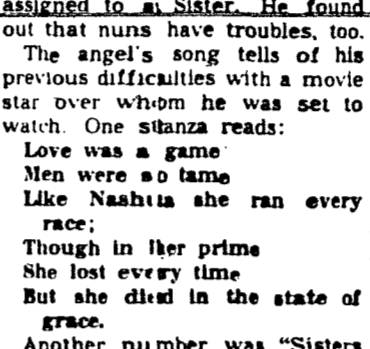

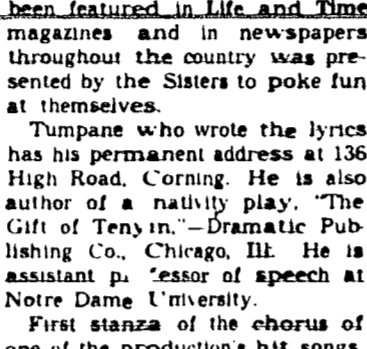

They say by nine we're all in bed;
They say we never doze at Mass,
They say we never scream in class;
They say we never wear a frown,
They say we never do the down;
They say we're never sad or cross,
They say we never sass the boss—
WELL, WE DON'T!

One of the most popular numbers was "The Very Interior Life of a Mother Superior," with words by Tumpane and music by Holy Cross. It went like this: When I'm looking ethereal, it's problems material, Over which I'm thrown for a loss. When the faucets are leaking, it's a plumber I'm seeking.

with minor league prophets and all;
I'm running this race for a major league place right up there with Peter and Paul.

The musical farce told the story of a Guardian Angel, worn out with watching over worldly people, who thought he had done an easy job when he was assigned to a Sister. He found out that nuns have troubles, too. The angel's song tells of his previous difficulties with a movie star over whom he was set to watch. One stanza reads: Love was a game, Men were so tame, Like Nansha she ran every race; Though in her prime She lost every time, But she died in the state of grace.

Another number was "Sisters in the Rain," by Tumpane and Birder:

And not St. John of the Cross, When they think I look mystical
I'm only statistical
Over prices of cabbage and peas.
I know it's heretical
To be arithmetical
But money doesn't grow on trees.
Oh, the very interior life
Of a Mother Superior
Is not so interior
It's veiled hysteria.
So the next time you see
A Mother Superior like me
Remember, dear friends, what I've said.
Don't say "How interior
This Mother Superior"
Just say a Rosary instead.
One of the features of the production was a Nuns' Ballet.

Cast and chorus united in singing "I'm Bucking for Sainthood" by Tumpane and Birder. Some stanzas:

I'm bucking for sainthood
I'm praying all day
I'm bucking for sainthood
On Judgment Day.
I don't want to kneel
In Heaven's left field

Oh, rain is great for grass and corn
It's great for hay and grain,
But there is nothing sadder
Than
Sisters in the rain
Ironing is a cinch for me
My habit's very simple,
But every time it rains on me
My wimple's full of dimples,
'Cause get mad at snow and rain
They fuss and fume and fret,
But there is nothing madder
Than
Sisters when they're wet.

Central Verein Now 'Central Union'

Wichita, Kan. — (NC) — The Central Catholic Verein of America will move into its 102nd year with a new name, delegates at its annual convention decided here.

The organization devoted to social action will henceforth be known as the Central Catholic Union of America. The change, which involves the substitution of the English word "union" for the German, was made to prevent misconceptions that the organization has restrictions on nationality.

(Plans for the national Central Union organization were first formulated in Rochester when societies from Buffalo and this city met. The organization started in Baltimore in 1898.)

The convention was held at the Hotel McManis, with Bishop Kearney, Delegate to this year's convention was Joseph H. Gervase, Rochester attorney and president of the local affiliated society.

AMONG NINE "declarations of social action," the equivalent of resolutions, the Union included a strongly worded warning against what it called "injustices" which hamper the continued operation and development of Catholic schools.

In other declarations, it opposed Federal aid to education; protested a "drugged public conscience" which misunderstands the meanings of words such as liberty and equality; opposed continued economic and military aid to Yugoslavia and other communist countries; recommended severance of diplomatic relations with Russia, and struck out of "murderous carelessness" of automobile drivers.

It renewed its pledge of loyalty to Pope XII and also called for well-ordered homes, stressing the obligations of parents to achieve sanctity.

Frank C. Gittinger, San Antonio, Tex., was re-elected president, and Richard F. Hemmerlein, Syracuse, N. Y., was chosen to be vice president.

ALBERT SATTLER, who is president of the National Council of Catholic Men and was Verein president from 1946 to 1955, was named to the organization's key committee on Social Action. Sattler is a New York attorney.

In his declaration on "injustices" in education, the Union said that there is "mounting evidence of a growing spirit of ill will and intolerance on the part of those who would claim for tax-supported public school systems a monopoly rights which must be recognized," it said.

In recommending the cutting off of diplomatic ties with Russia, the Union said that the step is justified by "Moscow's continuing hostile attitude" and its determination to overthrow democratic forms of government.

Copies of the Union's nine declarations were sent to President Eisenhower, Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, members of the foreign affairs committee of Congress and to Henry Cabot Lodge, U. S. Ambassador to the United Nations.

Father Victor T. Suren, director of the Union's central bureau in St. Louis, Mo., reported to the delegates that the organization's mission activities in the past year had sent more 46 bales of clothing to home missions, along with hundreds of cartons of books, shoes, medical supplies, religious articles and other items.

To foreign missions, he said, tons of material had been furnished, including 200 cartons of bandages and other medical supplies, and 72 cartons of religious articles.

Benedictines Staff Indian Schools In The Dakotas

Benedictine Fathers have four schools for Indians in the Dakotas. Like all of the schools on Indian reservations they have more applicants for enrollment than capacity to take care of them.

Last year the Benedictine's Immaculate Conception School at Stephan, South Dakota added a new and larger high school to the mission compound. This summer they built a dormitory which will take in 200 more students.

MONSIGNOR Bernard Gullen of the Marquette League, the Indian mission-aid organization, urges support of the venture.

"Every missionary knows that the school is a main avenue to conversion" points out the Monsignor. "One-third of the American Indians are still pagans and time is running short on this most important missionary field. The present Indian policy is to break up Indian reservation life through re-location of Indians in industrial centers and through ending the government's trusteeship of Indian land. The trusteeship prevents Indians from selling their land to non-Indians. Once the Indian is integrated into the mainstream of our American melting pot, it will be more difficult to reach him. A dollar now is worth ten in a distant tomorrow."

Donations may be mailed to the Marquette League, 289 4th Ave., New York 10, N. Y.
