SERVED IN CORNING Greek Orthodox Pastor Enters Catholic Church

East Pittsburgh, Pa. — (NC) — The pastor of the independent schismatic Church of St. John the Baptist here has announced that he has entered the Catholic Church because of "the desire for truth."

The Rev. Basil Simeon Zeleniak announced his decision to his congregation. In a written statement later, he said that his inquiries into the fundamental tenets of the Orthodox Church often presented problems of theology for which he could find no answer. He cited the question of the foundation of authority in the Church.

"After long study and consideration I fully realized that the truth (which surpasses all understandings) is the deposit of supernatural faith safeguarded by the authority of the Catholic Church," he said in his written statement, which was prepared for the Byzantine Catholic World newspaper of the Byzantine Rite Catholic Diocese of Pittsburgh.

"On this occasion I would like to call upon my friends, fellow priests and faithful to reconsider their standings in relation to the truth of their faith, and if they find lack of peace, I invite them to follow me and join in the humility of the true flock of Christ in order that all of us may be one flock under one pastor."

Corning — The Rev. Zeleniak served as pastor for a year of St. Mary's Greek Orthodox Church in Corning leaving here about two and one half years ago to accept a pastorate in Youngstown, Ohio. He was succeeded here by the Rev. Nicholas J. Wolchuk, present pastor. He also served in Buffalo.

The local church is in the Scranton Deanery of the Orthodox Church affiliated with Greece. The Rev. Zeleniak who served as pastor of a Syrian parish in Allentown, Pa. before coming to Corning was ordained in 1949. His brother, the Rev. John Zeleniak is dean of the Scranton Deanery with a pastorate in Taylor, Pa., near Scranton.

One feature will be the introduction of a prayer and song card that has been designed especially for the Sunday Mass in the parish. Dialogue Masses each evening will give practice in the use of this card and a demonstration of the ordinary Mass.

The last two days will center on the Holy Week Retention. Special sessions for priests, seminarians, Religious, liturgists and church musicians will be held on the last day of Conference Wednesday, August 22.
