Suzanne Crist Named Queen

Suzanne Crist, a Nazareth Academy junior and Monroe County Harvest Queen was chosen New York State Fair Queen last week in Syracuse.

Suzanne is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard R. Crist, 56 Lansing Circle, Gates, and a parishioner of St. Helen Church.

She will preside at the fair's opening Saturday, Sept. 1, cutting a ribbon to open events on the Syracuse fairgrounds.

In Syracuse, Suzanne had been interviewed by state officials in the contest and appeared on three television programs. She led a motorcade on a tour of the fairgrounds.

AS STATE FAIR queen, Suzanne will be flown via Pan-American Airways to San Juan, Puerto Rico for a vacation, accompanied by her mother.

A graduate of St. Theodore School, Suzanne plans to enter Nazareth College to major in social science after finishing her studies at the Academy.

Integrity Magazine Suspends Publication

New York —(NC)— Integrity magazine, a monthly published here by lay Catholics for the past 10 years, has announced it has been forced to suspend publication "because of corporate difficulties."

In its own words, Integrity was "dedicated to the task of discovering a new synthesis of religion and life for our times."

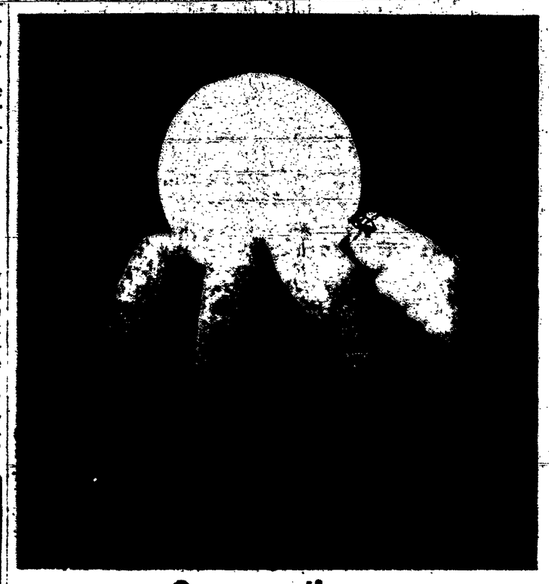
Hands Of A Priest — Bearers Of Grace



Consecration

Blessing

Baptizing

Absolving

Anointing

Hands of a priest, my hands, the God you serve
Because He shaped you, flesh and bone and nerve,
Will nestle in the cradle of your curve.

Alfred Barrett, S.J.

When the priest pronounces the words of the Consecration, "This is my body . . . This is the chalice of my blood . . . ", he speaks and acts as if he were Christ. At that instant everything happens as if the priest were identical with Christ Himself.

THE SAME IS true for the other sacraments. To those who have confessed their faults and asked pardon for them, the priest says, "I pardon you . . . Ego te absolvo." To those who come to receive Baptism, he says, "I baptize you . . . Ego te baptizo." To those who wish to unite themselves in Marriage, he says, "I join you in matrimony . . . Ego conjungo vos."

Ego: I. The word returns again and again like a theme. Is it in his own proper name, then, that the priest acts? If he did, who would not denounce such an intolerable use of power?

CLEARLY NO man other than Christ has ever had the right to speak thus. If the priest does so, it is because he no longer speaks in his own name. He acts, as the theologians say, "in the person of Christ."

The priest who celebrates the Mass, who baptizes, who absolves, anoints and blesses, is no longer the man we meet on the street. He no longer speaks of his own authority. He takes the place of Someone else. He represents Christ. He speaks and acts in His rank and place. When the priest administers a sacrament, he plays the role of Christ.

THE PRIEST is a man and yet through his ordination he becomes a sacrament of Christ. He has assumed a new character. He has been marked by a sign. From that moment on he is Christ living among us.

New York Priest Listed On 'Church Of The Air'

New York — (NC) — Father Francis X. Duffy, of St. Patrick's Cathedral here, will speak on the CBS radio program, "Church of the Air," on Sunday, Sept. 2. Program will be heard in the Rochester area over Station WHEC from 11 to 11:30 a.m.

Father Duffy's address is entitled "In the Sweat of Your Brow." The choir of Old St. Mary's Seminary in Baltimore, under the direction of Father Eugene A. Walsh, S.S., will provide music for the program.

DOINGS AT THE DALY'S

'Apples of Concord'

By Mary Tinley Daly

Mary Daly

A gnarled old apple tree in the front yard of our house practically amember of the family, at this late August season has reached its zenith for the time being. It's not an unalloyed blessing. Plop goes the ripe fruit all night bouncing off the roof. Squirrels scamper about taking a bite out of the finest.

Every morning somebody is stuck with the job of picking the crop, putting the best into bags for the neighbors, gathering the ones for home cookery, and the "googsey" task of shoveling the rotting ones for the compost pile from which the Head of the House fertilizes garden and shrubs.

If the adage about the doctor and the apple be true, Dr. Rude need never again climb our front steps. For we have, day after day, apples in every form within our culinary ken; baked, stewed, made into fritters, Brown Betty, apple snow, apple crisp . . . We've explored the possibilities of cider in years past but, somehow, our cider either sours into not even good vinegar, or degenerates into an applejack that would make an alcoholic swear off.

Largest of the home-cookery lot inevitably comes on the hottest days. After fixing one of the above-mentioned for daily consumption, we can sliced apples for pies and desserts, cook literally gallons of applesauce and put into jars according to the best of our canning knowledge. However, we have had remarkably bad luck with its keeping. (Anybody know the trick of making canned applesauce last?)

We spend evenings watching political conventions on TV whilst quartering apples, stewing them and letting the juice drip overnight to be made into jelly in the morning. It's good, if we do say so ourselves—some made with geranium leaf, some with mint and colored green to be used with lamb; the rest, plain old apple jelly.

And still there are apples . . . .

IN A WEEK or so will come the final clean-up and the compost will be enlarged. Then the ancient tree will be quiet for a while—just a pile of sturdy limbs low enough for children to climb onto and swing from; high enough to form a challenge to the young and a heart-in-mouth experience for adults watching the performance.

And, for a while, we'll have a recess from "apple meals." Come October and the "bought-en" apples will have their place in school lunch boxes. With Christmas, the extra-deluxe numbers wrapped in tissue paper will have their day. Then, somebody at our house will ask, "Why don't we have some of our own apples for a change Remember all that peeling we did last summer? My hands are just now bleaching out." That's when the rewards of all the current work will come. The jelly will taste mighty good, the canned fruit will make some appetizing pies, and the applesauce may be good this year, we eternal optimists hope.

Before the basement storehouse of results from this work-period is exhausted, the old apple tree will start its annual cycle again. Matter of fact, there is always a thrill with being awakened each morning by that gentle tap-tap of the long branch on our bedroom window. First sight each new day brings is a touch of nature—and a prayer is spontaneous reaction to it, watching God's handiwork go on through season after season, year after year.

First thing in the spring are the tightly closed buds. A week or so later, the delicately pink blossoms unfold a bit more with the dawn of each new day. The full-blown white blossoms last such a short time. Finally the tiny green apples appear, becoming week by week larger and riper.

WHEN THE first hard green apples would fall to the ground during early summer, they always used to prove irresistible missiles for our children. Tommy would resolutely start out after breakfast, like a commuter catching the 8:15, saying, "Well, I gotta go out and pitch my apples," It was the same way with each of our seven, tossing those apples for distance: "Bet I c'n hit that tree across the street!"

It's been quite a while at our house since the apples were used for throwing—until this year when the grandchildren, Lu Anne and Deirdre came visiting. As if they had been reared with the old apple tree, they took their stance on the terrace—just as their father, uncle and aunts had done—picked up apples and said, "Bet I c'n hit that tree across the street!"

Many a time, during practical moments, we have thought of having that tree cut down. It would give the house more sun, make yard work easier, discourage squirrels, perhaps make the roof last longer. . . .

We'd miss the old apple tree, though, with its morning message and it's perennial activity which is part of our house.
