Radio, TV Moral Issue Viewed In Rome

Vatican City — (NC) — Catholics must take an interest in the morality or radio and television programs, Msgr. Angelo Dell' Acqua, Vatican Substitute Secretary of State for Ordinary Affairs, stated here.

He made his views known in a letter to Bishop Martin O'Connor, rector of the North American College in Rome and chairman of the Pontifical Commission for Movies, Radio and Television. Members of the radio and television section of the commission are holding a meeting here.

Msgr. Dell'Acqua urged Catholics to oppose all radio and television productions that would undermine public morality, the sanctity of the home, or the sound education of youth.

THE VATICAN prelate said that particularly in the fields of radio and television, united action was needed to bring lasting results in the improvement of the moral tone of productions in these media.

Principal topics discussed at the meeting were the several problems connected with the production of religious programs and the moral quality of programs in general.

DOINGS AT THE DALY'S

Off To School We Go!

By Mary Tinley Daly

Mary Daly

"Welcome, Eileen!" The Sister at the front door of Regis College extended both hands to the somewhat nervous incoming student, then turned to greet us.

This begins a new phase in the life of Eileen . . .

For days we've been shopping, sewing on nametags, taking in and letting down skirts, sharing in the sisterly consultation as to which of the community-owned formals Eileen should take.

Preparations for the actual take-off were a bit hectic, goodness knows, but fun. The list of "to be done" didn't all get done. Zippers for both the Bermuda shorts and the green jumper will have to be done after arrival at college, as will hemming the red dress. With young people in and out all day, with Johnny, Lu and the babies coming for the farewell fried-chicken dinner, with the kind of glad-sad feeling pervading all of us, we weren't strictly on the practical side.

WITH EVERYBODY taking a load from Eileen's room out to the car, the driveway soon looked as though the family were moving out. A trunk, four suitcases, tennis racket, red boots, record player, camera, radio, blankets books, lamp, plaid dress-hanger bag, fuzzy stuffed bear, ice skates, hat box . . .

"Eileen, you'd need a trailer-truck to move all this gear," the Head of the House said. "Can't you leave some of it home?"

Everything, according to Eileen, was necessary and with Navy-trained, expert packer Johnny as master of ceremonies, believe it or not, the whole outlay was neatly stached away in trunk and back seat — with even room enough left over for the Head of the House and me to take a small handbag.

"Ever tell you about a friend of mine who went to Europe with fifty-four pieces of luggage?" the Head of the House asked, "A deck of cards and a pair of socks.

"Daddy, you are going to bring along a white shirt and tie, aren't you?" Eileen asked. "I know you like to travel in a sport shirt — but, after all, I want you to be dressed up when the Sisters meet you."

Agreed, and the Head of the House completed his packing in two minutes.

I SUPPOSE Eileen slept some that night before departure. But there was a farewell party with her friends, and at one o'clock I heard her washing her hair. At six she was pressing that college girls' 1956 badge — the plaid-lined trenchcoat.

A trip to Mass, a quick breakfast, and we were ready to take off.

"Now just a couple more things to put in," Eileen was bounding up the stairs, two steps at a time.

"Anything else goes in that car, I take my white shirt out," the Head of the House warned . . . but didn't carry out the threat.

"Think you might have room for one more package?" Ginny asked wistfully, leaning on the window of the car, "a package about the size of me?"

Too bad, but Ginny has to stay home and keep knicking away at the sixth grade so that her turn at college will come someday.

THE 500-MILE drive was delightful. Though nobody talked much, there was the feeling of camaraderie among the three of us. Vicariously, we were sharing with Eileen the thrill of "going away to college." The Head of the House and I both were recalling that same feeling of "being on your own," yet with the family interested in it all. There is the expectancy of meeting new people, studying in a different environment, the anticipation of "anything can happen" experiences. And they'll all be fun — or at least interesting.

"I just can't believe I'm really here," Eileen said as she drove along, "and if this road weren't checked by radar, we'd be there sooner!"

It's a great stage of life: enjoyment in the here and now, yet with a readiness to enlarge horizons; the desire to try making friends from the complete-stranger standpoint. . . . Makes us think of being in a plane and the few seconds after receiving word from the tower — just before the plane leaves the ground.
