"This is a red-letter day," said Auxiliary Bishop F. A. Marrocco of the Catholic Archdiocese of Toronto. "Never have so many gathered together from so many denominations before in the work of mercy."

With Bishop Marrocco at the head table at Anglican Bishop F. H. Wilkinson of Toronto and his suffragan, Bishop George Snell.

Bishop Marrocco said that the first concern of every denomination should be to see that slum-dwellers were moved to a place where a Christian foundation for their children could be laid "without the parents developing heart conditions and ulcers in the process."

He charged that many immigrants were being exploited by unscrupulous landlords in downtown Toronto.

"I crawled into one place myself," the prelate said, "and saw a man, his wife and four children. I thought perhaps they were better off in their D.P. camps."
