Priest-Author Keynotes Theatre Meet, Sees Great Progress In Catholic Art

"Good taste does not save souls—but ugliness has never been a means of gaining grace," Father John L. Bonn told a capacity audience in Nazareth College's speech theatre last Saturday afternoon.

The Jesuit priest, author of a new novel, "The Lively Arts of Sister Gervaise," gave the keynote talk for a day-long Catholic Theatre Drama Festival at the women's college.

If there must be a choice between good taste and devotion, Father Bonn said, there is no question which is the more important. But there is no reason why the two cannot exist simultaneously, he added.

"PRETTY GOOD" was what the priest-author termed the present condition of Catholic art, theatre, literature and music. Thirty years ago, Father Bonn said, no one would have dreamed of a Catholic play appearing on Broadway. Today, a theatrical season does not pass without two or three Catholic works opening in New York, and most often they are "hits."

It is not uncommon today, the speaker said, to see Catholic literature numbered among the first ten on a "best seller" list. Almost as a whole, Catholics have become initiated to good art in religious articles — "pious junk" is condemned on all sides.

Father Bonn is a professor on the faculty of Fairfield University, Fairfield, Conn.

THE DAY-LONG festival, under the chairmanship of Sister Helen Daniel, S.S.J., head of Nazareth's department of speech and drama, brought together representatives of Rochester's St. John Fisher College, LeMoyne College of Syracuse, Buffalo's D'Youville College, as well as the host college.

LeMoyne students presented an original one act play, "The Meditation of the Onion" written and directed by Gene McCarthy. Two monologues were given by students of D'Youville College: "Anne of the Thousand Days" and Joan from Shaw's "Saint Joan."

Lloyd Hubbard directed St. John Fisher's offering from Moliere's "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme" and two scenes from the Anouilh-Fry version of "The Lark" were presented by Nazareth College under the direction of Alan A. Stambusky Jr.

AN ORIGINAL one act play, "His Face" by Sister M. Alberta, S.S.J. was directed by Rita Trojan Stambusky and a film of the pantomimes of Marcel Marceau was shown.

Luncheon was held in the St. John Fisher College cafeteria.
