DOINGS AT THE DALY'S

By Mary Tinley Daly

As a long distance telephone operator for the summer, our Mary has joined the circle of girls who have, for a long time, been trying to locate another girl for a frustrated young man.

We don't know the names of the principal characters but their story is like that of a long felt low's well known poem about the Acadian villagers that will call them Fvangeline and Gabriel.

Religious Orders Of Men In Our Diocese

CARMELETTE FATHERS

Rev. Daniel J. Lynch, O. Carm. The Carmelite Fathers came to the Rochester Diocese in 1948 to found Whitefrains Scholasticate, a house of studies for Carmelite students to the priesthood, in Auburn. Carmelites also staff Auburn's new Mt. Carmel High School. Habit of the Carmelite Fathers is brown with a brown scapular and hood. In choir, they wear a white cloak and hood over the brown habit, because of which they are often referred to as the "whitefrains." (one of a series)

EVANGELINE 1957

(Allie except for the outcome that is.)

Three years ago the man—Gabriel—met a girl he couldn't forget. However, before he had a chance to date her, the family moved away. Where, Gabriel didn't know. He knew the name of her father, but nothing else about the family.

Then began the long, long search. Each week-end Gabriel would make seemingly useless calls. He started via long distance, with the bigger cities of the country: New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Detroit, Baltimore, San Francisco, Los Angeles—all down the line.

EVERY TIME the girls in the telephone exchange would find the father's name in one of the larger cities there was renewed hope in their hearts, and then:

"We have a man by that name on the line, sir," they would report, with pity in their voices. "but there is no Evangeline at that address. I'm sorry, sir, awfully sorry. Better luck next time!"

And so the dragnet went on, week-end after week-end, year after year. It was never the family with a girl named Evangeline.

What was the father's business? Gabriel didn't know, but the family could have moved anywhere. He had lived in a big city, where the two had met so, presumably, Gabriel reasoned, he had not moved to a farm. Yet, he might have retired. . . .

After a searchlight survey of the largest metropolitan centers, Gabriel started on cities of the population: Wilmington, Newark, Kalamazoo, Omaha, both
