

Microseisms In Erin Object Of IGY Search

Dublin — (NC) — Rathfarnham Castle, a Jesuit House of Studies, is the only Catholic institution in Ireland participating in the International Geophysical Year (IGY).

Located in a suburb south of here, Rathfarnham's Seismological Observatory will measure microseisms — feeble earth tremors — as its contribution to the IGY.

Founded in 1915 by the late Father William J. O'Leary, S.J., the observatory has the only two seismographs in Ireland. The original instrument was designed and built by Father O'Leary. Now, however, it is out of date.

The new director of the observatory, Father Richard Ingram, S.J., designed the seismograph now in use. It was built at the Institute for Advanced Studies in Cosmic Physics in this city.

During the IGY, Rathfarnham observatory will concentrate on the exact measurement and timing of earthquakes and tremors. Father Ingram is making a special study of a new method of recording the direction in which the earth moves at the source of the earthquake.

In this project he works closely with other seismographic stations, especially Canadian stations. Rathfarnham, the most westerly seismographic station in Europe, has an advantage over most European stations in that most microseisms are recorded more strongly in Ireland than on the continent.

appropriate for late-season croquet, worn with matching lisle or worsted stockings. Silk stockings were a great and unusual extravagance.

Following the recent fire that razed the old Schmanke store, a new ultra-modern store was designed for Mr. Schmanke by the store-planning division of the Brown Shoe Company. Herbert A. Fowler, local engineer is supervising the construction of the new building now nearing completion.

The new shoe headquarters at the same Dewey/Ridgeway location that the Schmankes have enjoyed for over four decades, will be of the "open display" type with a steel-girder formed canopy across the front and extending on the parking lot side so that patrons will have weather protection. The Dewey Avenue frontage will be faced with unglazed Bluegrass Green tile and will have a large Bluegrass Green illuminated display sign with gold neon lettering.

The interior will be spacious and provide separate departments for women's, men's and children's footwear beneath a dramatic fibreglass hung ceiling with flush lighting. Woodwork and furnishings will be in "Frost Walnut" especially tailored for the premises. There will be wall-to-wall carpeting of turquoise blue.

The new store will be modernly airconditioned with the new U.S. AIRCO unit incorporated with a DUSTRONIC air filtering system, together with a large NATIONAL heating unit. All units are being installed by the Rochester Automatic Heating and Air-conditioning Corp.

Together After 10 Years

A veteran of four years in a Communist prison camp, Father John A. Houle, C.F., meets with his mother in Honolulu for the first time in ten years. "He looks wonderful," Mrs. Houle said of the priest who had gained 25-pounds in just a few weeks of freedom. "They hated Almighty God." Father Houle reported of the Communist Chinese. "Their effort was to destroy the souls of men." In explaining Communist technique, Father Houle said, "Their whole system is built on methods of violence which over a period of time, adds up to torture." The two are returning to San Francisco by ship. (NC Photos)

First Of Convert Tribe Ordained Priest In Africa

Sa' Da Bandeira — (NC) — The two-year old Sa' da Bandeira diocese gained its 15th diocesan priest when Father Nicolau Marcos Sapetara, the first Cuanhama tribesman to become a priest, was ordained here.

Most of Father Sapetara's tribe were converted to Catholicism a half century ago, but he is the first of its members to reach Holy Orders. Bishop Alino Ribello Santana of Sa' da Bandeira, the newest Portuguese West African diocese, hopes that others will follow Father Sapetara's example. Native vocations are gradually and steadily increasing throughout the Portuguese colonies on both the eastern and western coasts of the continent.

at last they're asking me
"Take a little thing like sandwiches. Most kitchens look as if the sandwich hadn't been invented yet... no room at all to spread out bread and meats and milkings..."
"Then someone got the bright notion—ask women like me what we want in our homes."
"My list was a mile long! A wall oven... kitchen ventilating fan... waste disposer—and a BIG cutting board built in, for sandwich making. I wanted a real vanity in the bath... plenty of hot water... an honest-to-goodness living room—and a place for the kids to shake off sandwich leftovers before they come in the house..."
"And do you know—they're using all my ideas in Homer Homes!"
