DOINGS AT THE DALY'S

The mingled aromas of freshly made coffee, frying bacon, oatmeal — did these tickle your nose?

Mary Daly

If you're a young mother, the housework may not have gone like a breeze, but it went.

IF YOU'RE in the business world, the boss's unreasonable demands were "just one of those things" that you could smile off, silently.

IF YOU'RE a religious, the duties of the day didn't make a frightening inroad of your nervous system.

Perhaps it's a fetish on our part, but the good breakfast plank is one of the strongest in our own particular platform and we'll stick with it.

It has not always been easy smiling and "Mom's breakfast pitch" has caused unexplained jibes at our house.

"You want us to weigh 200 pounds?" the dieters ask.

"I just can't eat much early in the morning," another says.

Well, okay... When they were little children they ate the equivalent of the full number seven breakfast on any restaurant menu (the $1.50 order) and ate it hungrily.

TO GO BACK to the dieters, a shrug and sigh of resignation greet our contention that food taken in the morning should be a goodly portion of the day's nutrition requirements because you work it off, don't sleep and let it settle into fat.

And those who have "a late cyclic," granted there are people like that, right at our house and possibly at yours — those who are a bit lethargic in the early full steam ahead all morning long.

For those who can attend daily Mass, there is still plenty of time to eat before work or school.

hours and gather momentum as the day progresses. These are at their best in the late afternoon and in the evening when we of the early cyclic are sagging at the seams.

However, for the lunch packer, it's a wise idea to keep an eye on who is eating a good breakfast and who is not.

Gone are the days when the whole family got up at the same time, there was a goodly representation at Mass, everybody sat down at the same time to a hearty breakfast, and the lineup of school lunch bags that we could fill almost with our eyes closed.

Nowadays, everybody has a different morning mood as the alarm clocks go zzzing...

Breakfast, anyone?
