

Primate Cautions Polish Students

Warsaw — (RNS) — Stefan Cardinal Wyszynski, Catholic Primate of Poland, told the nation's students "I understand your fight for freedom of speech, but you should respect all those things which you have already and try to understand our present living conditions which are very difficult and complicated."

The Primate preached at a service in the church of St. Anne inaugurating the new university year. His talk came on the fourth consecutive day of anti-government demonstrations by university students in which several persons were seriously injured.

Speaking before an overflow congregation, Cardinal Wyszynski admonished the students that "by working hard you will build a better future."

"You should work as God would have you work," he said, "because it is not possible to love Poland without loving God. This is being said to you, my dear youth, by your Primate, and you have often said that you love him. The best thing you can do for our country is to work and study. You have received as good conditions as possible in our present situation."

The cardinal's sermon was broadcast by the Warsaw Radio, which described it as "an appeal to Polish youth to maintain order."

In his sermon, Cardinal Wyszynski said the conditions brought about by the last war had reduced standards of morality and honesty among Polish youth.

Requiem Mass For Truman Ken

Denver — (NC) — Requiem Mass was offered here for Fred Wallace, 57, brother of Mrs. Harry S. Truman, wife of the former President, who died (Sept. 30) of complications following a heart attack.

Mass was offered in St. John the Evangelist Church here. My Wallace, a convert, is survived by his wife, a son and two daughters.

Vatican Radio Raps Moscow Patriarch

Vatican City — (RNS) — The Vatican Radio, in a lengthy broadcast, sharply criticized Patriarch Alexei of Moscow, supreme leader of the Russian Orthodox Church, for his "cooperation with Communism" and his "attacks on the Vatican."

"This Patriarch," the station said, "has given in to Communist pressure and agreed to cooperate with them, hoping he will be able to preserve a small number of churches for his faithful and some clergy."

It said Patriarch Alexei's "loyalty to the Communists" will "always remain evil, being based on falsehood and ambiguity."

"THERE CAN BE no doubt that Moscow's present policy on religion, irrespective of whether it follows the Stalinist or the Khrushchev line, cannot be interpreted as one of freedom for religion," the broadcast said.

"Moscow uses the Patriarch to dupe his own people and to undermine the Catholic Church, using him as a weapon."

The Vatican Radio quoted a number of articles published by the Moscow Patriarchate as well as letters written by Patriarch Alexei to Orthodox Church leaders abroad. These documents, it said, fully supported the Russian oppression in Hungary and elsewhere and branded the Vatican as "the center of world Fascism."

Pius XII Greet African Queen

Jewish Symbol On Mass Vestment

Omaha — (NC) — The third annual Mass of the Edith Stein Guild to be offered in St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York City on October 12, will have special significance for three Omahans.

The unusual vestment to be used at the Mass was designed by Redemptorist Father Arthur Klyber, a convert from Judaism who is now serving Holy Name parish here. It was worn by Mrs. Anton Proskowec and Mrs. Bertha Straman of the parish.

The Star of David on the vestment is 17 by 19 inches, and is made of gold satin on a field of brocade white material. The garment has a Hebrew legend within the star. On the bottom are the first and last letters of the Hebrew alphabet: aleph and tav.

The annual Mass pays honor to Edith Stein who was Sister Teresa Benedicta of the Cross, a Carmelite nun killed by the Nazis in the gas chambers in Auschwitz, Poland, in 1942.

Pope Cheers Invalids, Tells Role Of Pain

Vatican City — (NC) — The sick and disabled of the Church are called upon to live their lives in union with Christ and to offer their sufferings for His Church, His Holiness Pope Pius XII said here.

The Pontiff addressed 5,000 invalids from France, Italy, Switzerland and the United States who had come to the Vatican with a pilgrimage organized by the Society of the Volunteers of Suffering.

"You are not called upon to accept," he told them, "you are asked to accept: always serenely and joyously if possible. And in this acceptance of your condition resides the fulfillment of the will of God in you."

"Thus, the promised fruit is already guaranteed: Jesus is in you. You are not useless. Jesus who descended to the earth to redeem mankind... wished that this should be accomplished through His sufferings. But His sufferings... and His work of Redemption... must be completed by our sufferings."

The Pontiff made a special trip to the Vatican from Castelgandolfo, the summer papal residence, to address the pilgrims, many of whom were lying on stretchers or sitting in wheel chairs in the Belvedere courtyard.

My Wife And I Can't Agree On The Kind Of Friends To Cultivate

By FATHER JOHN L. THOMAS, S.J.
Assistant Professor of Sociology at St. Louis University

"My wife and I can't seem to agree on the kind of friends we should cultivate. We come from somewhat different family backgrounds. Neither of us get along very well with the other's former friends. She wants me to drop most of mine because she doesn't approve of some of the things they do. I think this is unfair. I tell her she can have her friends and I'll have mine. What's wrong with that?"

I think, you realize, Bill, that the answer to your question calls for the making of a few necessary distinctions. Marriage is a partnership based on companionship. When you marry, you agree not only to establish a family but to face life together as two in one flesh.

The married couple are one, joined by a sacramental contract and the deep mystery of marital relations in a companionship for life. Although marriage does not deprive you of individuality, it does oblige you to think always in terms of your partner. This thinking together includes friends as well as other family relationships.

THIS IS THE overall picture, but, as you suggest, reality isn't quite so simple. Former, long standing friendships tend to persist and to be valued. If husband and wife cannot agree on these, trouble is bound to arise. Let's look at the situation a little more closely and perhaps we can see in what direction the solution will lie.

FIRST, it should be obvious that a married couple should have friends in common. If they are to be real companions for life, they must learn to play together as well as work together. Indeed, a great part of their entertainment and recreation should be shared as a couple.

The habit of doing things together starts with courtship. It should continue throughout marriage. If marital companionship is to mean anything in the couple's lives.

Some men apparently forget this. They expect their wives to remain at home taking care of the house and children while they enjoy the companionship of others. In some societies this is an accepted pattern. For various good reasons it is not the American way of doing things.

SECOND, BOTH husband and wife should take for granted that their partner may wish to maintain some friendships which may not be interesting to them. Opposition to this may stem from two sources. They may really feel that their partner's friends are not good for them and their marriage.

Undue drinking, gambling, and questionable association with the opposite sex may be occasioned by such friendships, and the spouse may rightly object to their continuation.

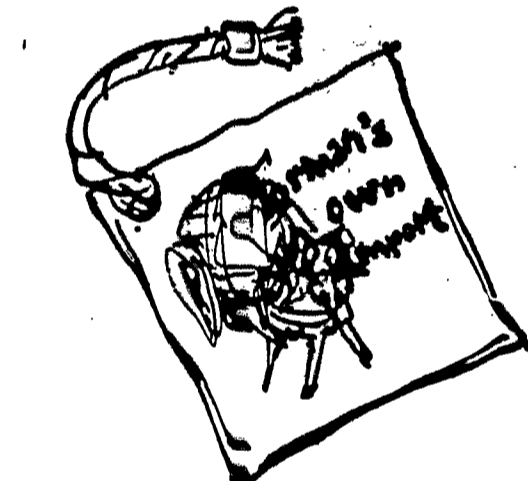

IN SEEKING a solution for your case, Bill, ask yourself the following questions. Have you cultivated a group of friends which you and your wife enjoy associating with as a couple? If not, you had best start finding some, for something has been wrong with your attitude toward companionship.

FINALLY, DOES your wife seem selfish and over-possessive? Some women are prone to this. On the other hand she may only be asking for an even break in companionship.

The important point for your future happiness is that you start making friends together as a couple. If you do this, the few friendships you may wish to maintain separately will seem relatively unimportant.
