Indian Missions Require Little Training Says League Director

A mission lay apostle can be trained in a few weeks, says Monsignor Raymond Cullen, director of the Marquette League, announced today. The League requires no training and a lay apostle may be secured for two or three months of his many years.

With a recommendation from his pastor and one from a physician as to the physical fitness, the missionary will receive an assignment and be on the way to a mission on an Indian reservation.

"The spiritual glow that comes to you when you have done something for God's little ones, the poor and sick, and to help carry His word to pagans will far outweigh the hardships of an Indian mission," Monsignor Cullen said to his prospective missionaries. "You will have the experience of living on an Indian reservation. Indian missions are different from that of other parts of the United States as that of any foreign land."

Full details may be had by writing Monsignor Cullen, director of Marquette League, 289 Fourth Avenue, New York 10, N.Y.
