Professor Robert S. Pasley of the Cornell Law School talked on

"The Catholic Student in a Secular University." Professor Pasley pointed out the importance of both students and teachers to a university. Two points were touched upon in the talk. What the student may take away from the university for good or for evil was the first point.

PROFESSOR PASLEY pointed out that a student who attends church regularly and receives the Sacraments often, will keep his faith whether he attends a secular university or a Catholic institution.

The other topic was "What can the Catholic Student bring to the university?" There are three ways in which a student may better a university. The first way is to show good example. The next is to maintain good grades. Thirdly, a Catholic student can bring the Catholic belief back to the university where it once was.

The student may do this by clearing up many of the misbeliefs and misconceptions about the Catholic Faith that many non-Catholics have, he said. Father Shannon closed the affair with a prayer.
