FATHER SOMIFFER said that he and three other priests in the rectory were "picked up and smashed against the opposite wall." Except for what they couldbrender to one another they were without aid for 12 hours. The bomb caused suffocating heat," he said, which continued without abatement as the wooden structures of Hiroshima went up in flames that raged for hours.

"I had been through many bombings at Tokyo," he continued, "and of course we were prepared for an ordinary bombing. But the atom bomb was so devastating we could not even reach first aid kits. For a long time we just lay where we fell. Then we revived enough to tear up our shirts, cassocks and the bed linen to make bandages. We were all bleeding profusely. Much later still, after we had recelved some help we used razor blades to cut out thousands of glass splinters imbedded in our
