

Installation Dinner Highlights Real Estate Board Of Rochester

The realtor president stated that Rochester has a higher percentage of home owners than the average and that there are very many prospective owners who are "backlogged" in Rochester due to the tight money situation that prevailed last year.
Kane expressed his belief that home-owner families are happier families.
"When a family becomes an owner of their home," he said, "they immediately have a security and an increased sense of importance. They become better citizens and more valuable members of their community. They take more pride in their home and the family ties become stronger. The children have a greater sense of security and respect for their family and home."
The 1958 Realtor president closed with a message which could have logical impact on many phases of earnings during the coming year.
"He who works with his hands is a laborer."
"He who works with his hands and head is a craftsman."
"He who works with his hands, head and heart is an artist."
"He who works with his hands, head, heart and feet is a SALESMAN!"

Retired Clyde Priest

'Missions Everybody's Business'

One of the most mission minded priests of the Rochester Diocese is Monsignor Joseph V. Curtin, retired pastor of St. John the Evangelist Church, Clyde.

The veteran pastor, forced by advancing age and ill health to retire from active duty this past June, still urges callers at the Clyde rectory to "say a prayer for the missions."

His study is piled with mission books and magazines. Curious and trinkets set him from grateful missioners decorate the mantle and bookcases.

IN ROCHESTER, Propagation of the Faith Society officials report he has personally supported a score of native seminarians in mission outposts enabling them to complete studies for the priesthood.

His parishioners at St. John the Evangelist Church, Clyde's only Catholic church, hold an enviable record, one that tops many larger parishes, in contributions to the missions, according to the Propagation reports.

Typical of the near thirty years Monsignor Curtin served as pastor at Clyde is the mission report for 1956. In that year, Clyde's 300 Catholic families sent over $3,000 to the Propagation of the Faith Society.

Children in St. John's parochial school caught the pastor's mission spirit and saved pennies to ransom 25 pagan babies through the Holy Childhood orphan aid program.

Jesuit Writes On Protestants

Garrison, N. Y. — (NC) — A 32-page booklet, "Protestantism in the United States," has been published by the Society of the Atonement friars of Graymoor Monastery here.

Written by Jesuit Father John J. Hardon, professor at West Baden (Ind.) College, the booklet is an analysis of the present status of the Protestant churches in this country and their efforts at unification.

The booklet contains charts and statistics illustrating the numerical division of U. S. Protestantism. It details general doctrinal and ritual differences, as well as contrary doctrines within the individual denominations.

It also summarizes the efforts of U. S. Protestants to investigate their own disunity and also contains a history and judgment of the Protestant ecumenical movement in the United States.

BESIDES THESE reported contributions, said Father Paul Cuddy, present pastor of St. John's, there are unrecorded donations to individual missionaries.

"A good share of these donations," said Father Cuddy, "are right from the Monsignor's own wallet."

Monsignor Curtin added "Well if I ask the people to give to the missions, I guess I should give too."

Asked if all his parishioners shared his missionary outlook, he stated quite emphatically, "Every real Catholic is interested in the missions!"

His missionary reputation began during his days as history and literature professor at St. Andrew's Seminary, then located next to old St. Patrick's Cathedral on Plymouth Ave. North.

He organized the Catholic Students Mission Crusade, a mission aid club still flourishing at both St. Andrew's and St. Bernard's Seminaries.

He met seminarians with his familiar question, "Want a good book?"

Students, always anxious to please a professor, would then be given one of the latest mission publications.

FATHER CUDDY reports his own interest in the Church's mission activities dates from his

Cardinal Home, Laughs At Red Charge

New York — (NC) — U.S. troops abroad are "very keenly aware of their responsibility to their country and their people at home," Cardinal Spellman said on his return home after a 25,000-mile trip by air.

After landing at Idlewild airport here, the Archbishop of New York said he had found troop morale "excellent" when he visited military installations in Anchorage, Alaska, Japan, Korea, Okinawa, Formosa, the Philippines and Germany.

AS MILITARY Vicar for Catholics in the U.S. Armed Forces, the Cardinal had made his seventh annual Christmas trip to visit with American troops in the Pacific area.

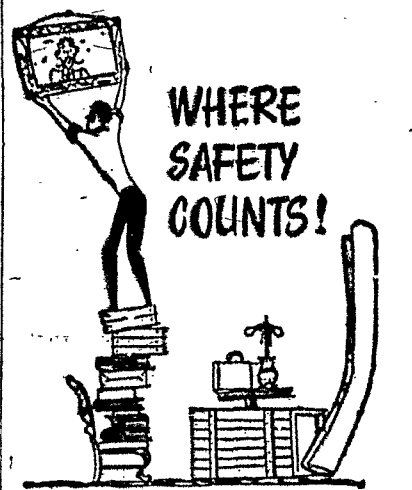

Cardinal Spellman, who stopped over in Rome on his return journey, said he found Pope Pius XII in "wonderful health."

Newsmen informed the Cardinal that while he was off on his trip he was called a "capitalist spy" by the communist press.

"Goody!" the Cardinal responded with a laugh. "I will have to call on Gen. McAuliffe for an answer to that."

THE CARDINAL referred to Gen. Anthony C. McAuliffe who, while in command of surrounded U.S. forces at Bastogne during the Battle of the Bulge in World War II, responded "Nuts" to a German demand for surrender. "Newsmen asked about a recent suggestion from Moscow to send an Ambassador to the Holy See. The Cardinal replied: "Certainly conditions now are not favorable for a rapprochement between Moscow and the Holy See."
