'Project Selma' Launched By St. Agnes Freshmen

Mission minded Freshmen in homeroom 311 at St. Agnes High School have launched their "Project Selma."

During a guidance period conducted by their homeroom teacher, Sister Murler, the girls were discussing hobbies, and their importance in everyday life. When suggestions were called for, they were many and varied. Popular hobbies ranged from sports of all types to handicraft.

BEVERLY VASSALLO offered the idea to develop not only new hobbies but help the missions as well. "Project Selma" was started. Under the direction of their mission leader, Andrea Wollensak, the girls decided to make objects for the missions on their own time. The deadline was set for the day Christmas vacation began. Dolls, candles, baby bottles and hats, aprons and handmade toys of all types began coming in by the dozen.

As a result of this project, many children in the Sisters of St. Joseph Mission headquarters in Selma, Alabama will be able to help. For the girls, Gertrude Schleg said, "It was fun doing something to help those poor children."
