New Aquinas Math Club Meets With Success

Aquinas Institute mathematics club, formed this year to explore the world of theoretical mathematics, has met with a great deal of success according to Rev. Edward Doser, CSB, club moderator.

The club was designed to build a foundation in analytical geometry, post high school algebra and calculus. Currently the club members are dividing their time between problems dealing with the amount of solid fuel needed to launch a rocket that would put a satellite in orbit and recreational mathematics.

Father Doser at a recent club meeting, enumerated some of the typical elementary questions connected with numbers which for nearly three centuries have formed a large part of most compilations of mathematical amusements.
