dwelling house on Staten Island, where he had Elizabeth and her children, spend the summer. She observed the piety and religious demeanor of the Irish emigrants who were quarantined there under the doctor's care.

She noted: "The first thing these poor people did when they got their tents was to assemble on the ground, and all kneeling adored Our Maker for the mercy and every morning sun lit them repeating their praises."

In August, 1801, Dr. Bayley ministering to a crowded number of passengers and crew from a newly-arrived ship, was taken ill of the very contagion from which he sought to preserve others.

Realizing he was about to die, and worried lest, in spite of his great moral virtues, that his soul's salvation was in danger, Mrs. Seton first had recourse to prayer for his recovery, but principally for the welfare of his soul.

In the arms of her dear husband, and with full confidence in God's goodness, she then, upon inspiration, went to the cradle of her baby Catherine, whom she took up in her arms.

Out on the balcony of the building she raised up the child to heaven, and apostrophized: "O Jesus, my merciful Father and God! Take this little innocent offering; my heart; take it, my Lord, I give it to Thee with all but save my father's soul."

God did not take the sacrifice. Little Catherine later became a Sister of Mercy and the only one of the children to live to old age. Dr. Bayley expired a few days later. He was the demurest and perfectest gentleman, honest and shrewdly honorable and thoroughly fearless.

Just a year after the doctor's death, Mrs. Seton's fifth child was born Aug. 20, 1802. Baptized Rebecca on the Feast of St. Michael, the event was recorded by the mother's pen. "This day my little Rebecca was received into the ark of Our Lord."

"Rooted in Charity"

Continuing, perhaps a commentary of her own philosophy, Mrs. Seton wrote: "She (the infant) has been blessed . . . that she . . . being steadfast in faith, joyful through hope, and rooted in charity, may pass through the waves of this troublesome world, that finally she may enter the land of everlasting life."

In 1806 the physicians decided that Mr. Seton's health required a sea voyage, and Elizabeth determined to accompany him to Italy with her eldest daughter, Anna Maria, who was also the four younger children, William, Richard, Catherine, and Rebecca were left in the care of their Aunt Rebecca. Those of her foster brood were left with other relatives.

In early October they sailed aboard the little ship Shepherdess, commanded by a jovial Irishman, Captain O'Brien, whose wife was on board with their 18-month old daughter. During the 36-day voyage to Leghorn, Italy, both children caught the whooping cough, but it was otherwise a tranquil passage. They were not disturbed by Barbary Pirates in the Mediterranean.

Quarantined at Port

They were detained at the port lazaretto (quarantine) for four weeks because of Mr. Seton's illness, and there she nursed her husband and child through a difficult period of which she wrote: "Wednesday, Nov. 23. Not only willing to take my cross, but to kiss it, and while I was praying for our consolation, my poor William was taken with the cough which was almost mortal for him. His strength was going from him; from then our bewails seldom ceased."

This lazaretto, or pest house, was a bad place for the sick. They were locked in barred cells, cold and windy, with damp walls, and for beds had only mattresses upon boards.

Their friends in the city did all possible to help them and ease the distresses, but the authorities were fearful of the contagion spreading.

Italian Friends

These friends were the Filicchi Brothers, merchants with whom Grandfather Seton had long done business and with whom William Magee had formerly stayed during his earlier travels in Europe. In Leghorn her stepbrother Guy Carleton Bayley was employed in the Filicchi firm.

Thus did the mother's serenity and cheerfulness impress the little girl, whose own morale was a reflection upon the valiant spirit of the worried young wife.

Out of the Dungeon

Finally, on Dec. 19, they were released from the dungeon, in which the father had almost died. On shipboard and in the pesthouse they had been confined 56 dreary days since leaving New York, and all three were so pale and pitiful that all Leghorn was touched by the trials which the Americans had endured.

The Filicchi Brothers hurried them to the cordial climate of Pisa, 15 miles away. But William Seton died just eight days after his removal from the terrible lazaretto.

Next week's installment will relate the conversion of Elizabeth Seton to the Catholic Faith, a story which begins in Italy and climaxes with her Baptism in New York.

Red Terrorists Strike At China Bishops, Clergy

In his message, sent here just before his arrest, Bishop Tang stated that he is determined to continue his resistance to the demands of the communists. They want him to resign his bishopric, admit that he had done wrong in denying the Sacraments to "patriotic Catholics" and to break relations with the Holy See.

The Bishop said that he fears neither death nor imprisonment, but added that he is apprehensive lest he be broken down and sign compromising documents if he is subjected to severe physical pressure.

Bishop Tang has already undergone "arduous and fatiguing" public denunciation demonstrations, each lasting from two to four hours, eyewitnesses have reported here.

As the communists intensify their drive against the Church throughout China, an account of the election of a "patriotic bishop" for the diocese of Chengtu has appeared in a communist newspaper.

The Szechuan Jih Pao states that Father Li Hsiung was "elected" bishop and Fathers Tang Chun and Li Tao-Kwei auxiliary bishops at a meeting held on December 16, the day after the indoctrination courses for Szechuan Catholics were formally closed by the communists.

WITH NO BISHOP present the members of the Patriotic Association of Chinese Catholics did not attempt even a pretense of a valid consecration. The paper reported the "consecration and installation" of the new "bishop" as follows:

"Father Yang Shih-ya and three others, on behalf of the entire body of delegates, offered the ring, token of authority to the newly elected bishop while Tang Ching, the new auxiliary bishop put the ring on the bishop's finger. Leading members of the clergy and the faithful then kissed the ring."

"With the council as witness," the story continued, "Li-placing his hand on the Bible was sworn in as full bishop of Chengtu Diocese. He said in his pledge: 'I personally feel I am not fully capable of shouldering such heavy responsibilities. . . . From now on I will guide the clergy'

PARABLES FOR TODAY

God the Divine Planner. In planning and trying to build with his own hands a lasting city in this world modern man is guilty of playing God.

The folly of all our modern blind planners was exposed long ago by Our Lord in his famous parable called "the Rich Fool" or "the Rich Miser." Christ's Parable of the Rich Fool might better be called the story of the Man Who Played God.

This Rich Man's mistake was not that he was rich. His fault was that he was foolish. Like the modern planners of their own destiny, the Rich Man dedicated himself to the accumulation of worldly wealth and placed all his hope in his own ability to become successful.

He planned and worked to get ahead of everybody else. He planned to have a goodly share of this world's goods. And his greedy efforts paid off. He began to prosper. He had to tear down his old barn and build bigger barns to hold and build bigger barns to hold and house all his possessions.

FINALLY THE day came when the Rich Fool "had it made," as we say today. All his dreams were realized. He was content and secure in his planned prosperity.

Delighted with his success the Rich Man sat down to congratulate himself. "Come, soul," he said to himself, "thou has goods in plenty laid up for many years to come. Take thy rest now, eat, drink, and make merry." (Luke 12:19)

At this very moment this Rich Man's self-made Paradise came tumbling down. His little world fell apart. Here God whom the Rich Man had forgotten stepped into the picture and said to him:

"Thou fool, this night thou must render up thy soul. And who will be master now of all thou has laid up?" (Luke 12:20)

Such is the fate of "the Man who played God." The Rich Fool, Christ tells us, is the tragic figure of the man "who lays up treasure for himself and has no credit with God." (Luke 12:21)

THE SIN of our modern age is the sin of the Rich Fool — the folly of playing God. This is the blunder of trusting in our bank account more than Divine Providence. Modern man's distrust of God is not a new or modern sin, only today it has grown more popular.

Today we have returned to the Original Sin — the sin that brought the first Paradise crashing in ruin. Like Adam and Eve we are tempted to think that we "shall be gods" on our own. Given half a chance to do things our way, we hope that our eyes "shall be opened" to see the dawn of a new day. Like Adam and Eve we stretch our hands to the forbidden fruit and ignore God's warning of sudden death.

In our frantic efforts to build here a lasting city we forget the warning of the Psalmist: "Unless God builds the city, they labor in vain who build." In our passion for planning our own future and fortune we forget that "man proposes but God disposes."

The modern apostasy from God, particularly as it is reflected in our own country, does not mean that we Americans hate God or no longer love Him. Only that many of us no longer trust Him. The more we have placed our trust in worldly possessions the more we have lost our confi-

Pope Tells Orders To Stress Quality

Vatican City — (RNS) — Quality rather than quantity should govern admissions to religious orders, Pope Pius XII cautioned at an audience to the superiors of more than 200 male congregations which have their headquarters in Rome.

He told the superiors they should be careful to receive only suitable candidates and should be more preoccupied about not accepting unworthy ones than in increasing the ranks of their orders.

THE PONTIFF stressed that in these times especially "it is

U.S. Priest Heads Satellite Scientists

Accra, Ghana — (NC) — Divine Word Father John Koster, of Dunkerton, Iowa, is chief of the team of Ghana scientists who are recording the progress of the U.S. satellite, Explorer.

Father Koster and his associates were among the first ten scientists in the world to pick up the signals emitted by the satellite after it had been launched.

Working at the observatory of the University College of Ghana where Father Koster is a lecturer in physics and chaplain to Catholic students, the scientists are members of the Ghanaian committee collecting information for the International Geophysical Year.

40 Catholic Dailies Read in Holland

Amsterdam, Netherlands — (NC) — Dutch Catholics, who number only about four million, support nearly 40 Catholic daily newspapers.

Many Catholic families in the Netherlands subscribe to several of them, most often to a regional paper and one of the three large national dailies which circulate throughout the country.

Two of the three — De Tijd (The Times) and De Volkkrant (The People's Paper) — are published in Amsterdam. The other — De Maasbode (The Mass Courier) — appears in Rotterdam.

Formosa Tribes Joining Church

Taipei, Formosa — (RNS) — Half of the estimated 140,000 aborigines in Formosa are either baptized Catholics or are being prepared for baptism, according to an official Catholic report here.

The report said the conversion rate among the seven main aboriginal tribes continues to be "phenomenal." The aborigines are of Malayan stock.

MARCH IS THE MONTH OF St. Joseph

After the Mother of God, not one of the children of men was ever so gifted and adorned with natural and supernatural virtues, as was St. Joseph. In purity of heart; in chastity of life; in humility, patience, fortitude, gentleness and manliness of character, he reveals to us the perfect type and model of the true Christian.

From his throne of glory in heaven, St. Joseph watches over and protects the Church militant, and no one who calls on him in need ever calls in vain. He is the model of a perfect Christian.
