Two American Catholic priests, released from Communist Chinese detention in mid-June said on their arrival here that they had suffered ill treatment during their five-year terms for alleged "economic sabotage" and espionage.

Father Joseph P. McCormack, M.M., of Palmyra, N.Y. and Father John P. Wagner, O.F.M., of Pittsburgh, Pa., were pale and worn as they disembarked from the British ship Changsha out of Shanghai. They recounted their experiences at a press conference held at the Catholic Center.

Father McCormack, 65, said he underwent lengthy interrogations every day, sometimes for as long as two and a half hours. At times, he recalled he became dizzy and collapsed when returned to his cell.
