Free Germans Oppose Red Exchange Delegations

Essen — (RNS) — The Association of German Catholic Students' Organizations (Cartellverband) in West Germany went on record at its annual meeting here as opposed to exchanging delegations with student groups in Communist countries.

It stressed that experience had shown that such exchanges and talks with carefully selected delegations from the Soviet Zone of Germany and other Communist countries "do not serve a fruitful purpose."

THE CARTELLVERBAND said West German Catholic students' groups will make efforts instead to continue and strengthen genuine human contacts with students from Communist countries on a personal, individual basis.

Its declaration was in line with an earlier statement by the group which had criticized plans by the West German Association of Students to establish official contacts with student organizations in the Iron Curtain countries as "irresponsible in the present situation."

AMONG WOMEN
25 Years Later
By Mary Lennon Snyder

A few days ago I drove down the east shore of lovely Owasco Lake on a hot still afternoon such as must have been the one on which Monsignor Straub and the late Joseph Harrington took their historic ride in 1933. Their ride resulted in the purchase of the land on which Camp Columbus stands today; mine had the same destination.

Mrs. Snyder

As I proceeded along the road almost empty of traffic in the July sunshine, I kept thinking of the changes 25 years must have brought to the shoreline.

As soon as one turns on the Koenig's Point Road which follows the shoreline while Route 38 turns inland in a business-like manner enroute to Moravia, Camp Columbus comes into view.

Here is no bucolic wilderness of unkempt shrubs and fallen logs. The land drops pleasantly away from the road to the shoreline along which there is a collection of well constructed buildings.

Here and there on the well kept grounds are the rose beds and beautiful flowers which at St. Alphonsus we have come to associate with Msgr Straub's diligent care of God's property.

AS I DROVE along the camp road in the mid afternoon heat, there were no signs of camp life. Driving past the Counsellor's cabin, past the Chapel of Our Lady Queen of Peace which seems to dominate the camp, I parked the car near the office and went to the office door.

I felt a little like a character in a drama — the only human being visibly alive in what must be a teeming hill of activity. The telephone within the office began to ring as I put my hand to the door so I waited for a minute.

From one of the nearby buildings a lad dashed to the office, added a "Hi" as he passed me, and after dispatching his business within, returned courteously to welcome me.

I had gone to the camp to pick up news for this paper, so I asked for the camp director or the head counsellor.

When the head counsellor Paul McCabe came up from the waterfront, I commented to him on the courtesy and good will which had been accorded me. He replied, "That is the youngest savage," by which he referred to young Gary Salvage and not to the campers as a whole.

After picking up the news I had come for I asked Paul several questions about the camp and from the answers I concluded that Camp Columbus is again this year living up to its boast of "Twenty-five years for God and Country."

HE SPOKE of the good times, the well planned sports but through the whole program I felt that here in a beautiful setting the boys were given an opportunity to practice bringing God into their leisure time activities.

Twenty-five years ago if Father Straub had invested his endowment policy in a gilt edged security today he would doubtless have a sizeable bankroll; instead he placed his investment in the bodies and souls of the boys and girls intrusted to his care. Need more be said!

• A man took his Great Dane to a veterinarian. "Doctor," he said, "you've got to do something. This dog spends nearly all his time chasing sports cars."

"Well, that's only natural," replied the vet. "Most dogs chase cars."

"Yes," the man agreed. "But Gordon here catches them and buries them in the backyard."

Library Offers 'Vacation Loan'

Patrons of the Rochester Public Library may now borrow books on "vacation loan," according to Librarian Harold S. Hacker. The extended loan policy, the librarian said, permits the borrowing of books which are not in great demand for a period longer than the regular four week loan period.
