Workshop Enlists Aid Of Father Reed, Others

Two educators known in Rochester are among outstanding figures in many fields who have volunteered their services at Woodstock College, Jesuit Theological School, to approach to catechesis, critique of present day norms for secondary education and the use of television in education. Classes will also be had in liturgy and its teaching, missiology, biblical criticism, art, the metaphysics of love and mathematics.

THEY ARE: the Rev. Lorenzo Reed, S.J., director of secondary education for the Jesuit Province of New York and John J. Menahan, noted Rochester artist and associated with the art department, University of Rochester. Father Reed laid the groundwork for establishment of McQuaid Jesuit High School in Rochester.

The workshop program has the twofold aim of continuing preparation for work in education on all levels and of stimulating interest in new developments in education. It is believed to be the first effort of its kind during the final years of training for the Jesuit student.

The schedule includes workshops in advanced placement, The 7-33 program for elementary, secondary and higher education, psychology and counseling, new

Father Erb Given Mission Meet Post

The Rev. Charles G. Erb, S.V.D., a native of Rochester, was named to head the publicity committee for the Mission Secretariat meetings, Sept. 22, 23 and 24 in Washington. Some 600 missionaries from around the world are expected to participate.

Father Erb, a Divine Word priest has served in Alaska, Europe and Africa, both as an Army Chaplain and as a missionary. He is widely known in Rochester for his arrangement of the World Scenerama, the mission exhibit held at Rochester War Memorial in October, 1955.

THE MEETING of missionaries will be the largest such gathering ever held in the United States. More than 100 heads of religious orders will discuss problems of administration. Medical and educational work on the field, the training of future missionaries, recruitment and editorial work will all be discussed in group meetings.

The secretariat is a clearing house for information and services to aid American Catholic Foreign Mission work. With a membership of 165 congregations which maintain personnel on overseas missions, the Secretariat provides for an exchange of ideas and practical help.

Father Frederick A. McGuire, C.M., a veteran missionary, and known in Rochester where he has visited is executive secretary at the national headquarters in the NCWC Building in Washington.
