East German Catholics Face New Red Threat

Berlin - (RNS) - East German Communists in recent weeks have notably stepped up their campaign against the Catholic Church in the Soviet Zone. For the first time, they are hinting openly at efforts to pressure East German Catholics into "disassociating" themselves from the West German hierarchy.

COMMUNIST propaganists are capitalizing on statements by West German bishops and the ologians which they charge were calculated to drum up support for the atomic armament of West Germany.

One of the statements was a joint pastoral letter of the bishops of North-Rhine Westphalia, which stressed that Catholic teaching does not rule out the defensive use of nuclear weapons.

The other was a declaration by seven prominent theologians which also upheld the defensive use of atomic weapons. Obviously referring to West Germany's membership in NATO, it said that if a State belongs to a defense system and fulfills the resulting obligations, including ap. The Communists have contended that the two declarations-constitute direct support by the Ger-man hierarchy of West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer's "atom war policy."

SINCE CATHOLIC prelates in the Soviet Zone also belong to board member, "There is no the Conference, the Communists statute which authorizes the added, it remains to be seen expenditure of public funds for whether, and in what way, they the maintenance of a school will disassociate themselves from lunch program for parochial the West German Bishop's "support of atomic armament." school students."

I've Been Married For Six Months, I Still Can't Figure My Wife Out

By FATHER JOHN L. THOMAS, S.J. Assistant Professor of Sociology at St. Louis University

We've been married six months now, and I still can't tigure my wife out. Like the other evening, I knew she'd been crying about something, but do you think she'd tell me? Some days when I'm tired, she wears me out with talking; at other times, she clams u pand shows no interest in what I want to tell her, These are. only a few examples. Do you think we're incompatible?

You probably are, Frank. for as Chesterton once remarked, "Men and women are incompatible by nature!

It would be little short of a miracle if you and your wife always felt the same way, were emotionally up or down on the same days, and felt like talking or being silent at the same times.

Unfortunately, there's been so much talk about the need for "compatibility in building a successful marriage" that many young couples feel they're just not meant for each other if they don't find Perfect agreement.

What does Chesterton's remark really mean, Frank? Obviously, that men and women, as two distinct expressions of human nature, are necessarily different; and with the French, most of us would agree; "vive la difference" But there's more to it than that. No two women

- or two men - are quite alike. Since marriage involves such constant, intimate companion. ship, it brings out the individual masculine and feminine differences of husband and wife in full contrast. Dating and courtship do this to some exteril, but they are relatively shallow associations in comparison with marriage.

Whether they recognize it or not, most couples put on their best behavior during courtship. the routine intimacy of In marriage, they appear as they really are.

Hence only in marriage do couples start getting acquainted with each other to any marked degree. The process takes time, starting in earnest preciate each other's diverse qualities. Some fail to do this because they foolishly believe that they know each other perfectly already; while others are so immature and self-centered that they simply ignore the richness and distinctiveness of their partner's character. How can you go about getting better acquainted with your wife? Paradoxically, Frank, the first step is to become better acquainted with yourself. You need greater insight into your own character, your changing moods, interests, and dispositions.

Reflect on your own need for encouragement, friendship, atteration, and affection. Analyze your motives, your reactions to success or failure, your own emotional ups and downs.

Once you have gained some insight into yourself, apply this knowledge to your wife.

Try to put yourself in her position. She too is an individual, with her distinctive moods, reactions, and personal needs.

These are different from your, own, of course, but they make her what she is, the woman you loved and married. Like ourself, she also seeks happi-

emotional effervescence of first intimacy wears off. In this sense, we can say that marriage really begins only after the homey moon has falled. THIS DOES not mean that marriage is a dull, monotonous routine into which you have been tricked by your emotions. It can become such only for shallow couples who make no attempt to understand and ap-ness and fulfillment in marriage.

If adjustments must be made, remember, Frank, you must both make them. In marriage you are helpmates, partners, supporting one another, and helping to carry each other's burdens. You can do this from day to day only to the extent that you understand each other.
