DOINGS AT THE DALY'S

'Work Is Prayer'—Family Style

By Mary Tinley Daly

"A dilettante dabbling in an ocean of leisure" columnist Mary Haworth dubs the childless matron, "no matter how busy (she may be) in the arena of good works." Comparing this life to that of the average housewife with several young children, the well known writer in the field of human relations then goes on to tell of a fortnight's visit paid here by daughter Mary Elizabeth and the four grandchildren, eldest aged four.

Mary Daly

"As hostess," Mary Haworth wrote, "I enlisted the help of two full-time maids, the local diaper service, and the expert support of the children's mother and their youthful auntie, to keep order. Still there was never an idle waking moment — although on her home ground, their mother handles the job unaided."

"Remind you of anybody?" I asked reading this part aloud to the Head of the House at breakfast.

"Lu and her four-under-five?" he chuckled. Just then the phone rang.

"Hi," came Lu's voice against a background of childish voices. "We're home. Vacation went that-a-way. Would it be convenient for the children and me to bring a picnic lunch and eat it with Mary?"

"Would it ever!" from Mary at her beside extension.

AT NOON Lu and the four arrived: Lu Anne, blond bangs damp with perspiration bumping a big thermos jug of lemonade up the front steps; Deirdre, almost four, carrying a box of sandwiches; Sean, almost three, bearing cookies and stealing a couple on the way; Maura, 21 months, having a hard time getting her fat self up the stairs. All had evidently been recently tubbed and scrubbed, for, like all children, they won't stay that way long.

Lu herself, looking as though a brigade of servants had been on hand with preparations, was leisurely, laughing and concerned only that the children might be too noisy during the bedside picnic.

Everybody "ate hearty" for Dalys, young and old, are hearty eaters and then the children, each in turn, had to knock on Mary's cast "to see if Mary had had enough to eat."

"So vacation went haywire?" we asked, (We had seen the take-off with the endless amount of work to provide food, bedding, clothing for the family-of-six as Johnny and Lu prepared to enjoy a week's vacation at a beach cottage with another young couple and their children.)

"Well," there was a slight quaver in Lu's voice, "The first day was fun — and then somebody — one of their kids or one of ours — stopped up the plumbing. We were too far away from civilization to get it fixed right away, so we just had to come home. Oh, well," Lu smiled. "Someday we'll laugh over it — I guess — and anyway, we have this picnic, and I can catch up on housecleaning. . ."

HARKING BACK to the days when we had many small children, we could envision the amount of work that had gone into even this, the "casual" picnic: not only the food preparation but the clean up of the little house, the usual daily wash — and putting away of yesterday's wash — the aforementioned tubbing and scrubbing, the inevitable pick-ups, such as when Maura made scrambled eggs on the kitchen floor, the refereeing of squabbles, the answering of a countless number of phone calls . . .

"Nver an idle waking moment" came back to mind from that Mary Haworth column.

Gathering together the remnants from the picnic that had been such a morale-booster to her immobilized sister-in-law, Lu washed sticky faces and hands and prepared to drive the quartette back home for naps. Then, of course, there would be dinner to get, more baths and bedding down of youngsters before entertaining friends for the evening. ...The way of life of a Religious

The way of life of a Religious,—priest, Sister or Brother — is one of complete dedication.

That same spirit of selfless dedication can be found not only in monasteries and convents, behind cloistered walls and in mission fields. It is in home — in crowded city apartments or airy farm houses, in homes on Main Street or Kenwood Boulevard — wherever parents are "rearing a good Catholic family."

New Gift Shop At Hospital

Something new has opened at St. Mary's Hospital, Rochester.

A greatly enlarged gift shop located just off the main lobby at the Genesee St. hospital, which has enabled the shop to greatly expand its facilities and variety of articles carried.

KNOWN as the Marillac Gift Shop, it was founded in February, 1950 by Mrs. Rudolf C. Siebert during her four year term of office as chairman of the women's board of the hospital.

Upon her resignation in 1957, Mrs. Joseph S. Weber became chairman and served for one year. The shop was named after the Countess Louise de Marillac, the founder of the Daughters of Charity of St. Vincent de Paul in France, the order to which the Sisters of Charity who maintain St. Mary's Hospital, belong.

DURING RECENT alterations in the hospital after the coming of Sister Teresa, new administrator of St. Mary's, the location of the shop was changed.

Larger quarters were provided, so Mrs. Frederick G. Mosser, present chairman of the women's board, re-organized and planned to increase the services the shop could render to patients, the public and the hospital personnel.

She has appointed a committee of board members headed by Mrs. John Gleason, chairman, Mrs. Gordon A. Reitz, Mrs. Frank P. Feerick, and Mrs. Paul Neubert who will have charge of all shop activities.

THE NEW shop is occasioning much admiring comment. The blonde wood, the blue, white, and gold color scheme, and the attractive glass show cases, plus the large variety of articles and gifts offered combine to make this service and gift shop one of the most popular places in the hospital.
