

Vatican City — (RNS) — Among the thousands who crowded into St. Peter's Basilica here to witness the coronation of Pope John XXIII were five members of the Roncalli family, seated in a special enclosure near the basilica raised their voices in a deafening roar of "Viva il Papa" — a salute that the new Pope would hear many more times in his reign. Members of the diplomatic missions of more than 20 nations rose to their feet.

Among the national missions was that of the U.S. Serving as personal representatives of President Eisenhower were Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell, Deputy Undersecretary of State Robert Murphy and Mrs. Clare Boothe Luce, former U.S. Ambassador to Italy.

Canada was represented by Solicitor General Leon Bales.

Premier Amintore Fanfani headed the Italian mission, while Great Britain was represented by the Catholic Duke of Norfolk, Premier Duke and Earl and Hereditary Earl Marshal of England, Chinese Minister of Foreign Affairs Huang Shao-ai represented his country. The Austrian delegation was led by Premier Julius Raab who also acted as the personal representative of Austrian President Adolf Schaerf.

Other national representatives at the coronation included Foreign Minister Marcello Mathias of Portugal; Belgium's Prince Albert of Liege, head of King's list; and the German Foreign Minister Konrad Adenauer. For the separate Pontifical Mass, the Pope continued to minister Franz Josef Strauss of Germany; Premier Eamonn De Valera of Ireland; French Minister of State Pierre Pflimlin, and former President Enrico Celo of the Swiss Federal Council. Morrison's mission was headed by Prime Minister Sir Aneurin Bevan.

The procession moved slowly to the Chapel of the Blessed Sacrament where the Pope dismounted and knelt for a moment of adoration before the sacramental host, whose vial he carried.

The procession then moved to the Chapel of St. Gregory on the Epistle Side of the Basilica where the Pope received the obedience of the Cardinals, Archbishops, Bishops, Abbots and the college of confessors of St. Peter's. After imparting his apostolic benediction, the Pope rested for an hour of Terce of the Divine Office. While the chant was continued by the choir, he began vesting for Mass.

As the Pope was assisted to vesting in fazon, gold, red, white, gloves and chasuble, the Cardinals vested themselves in mitre and cope.

When all were vested, the procession moved toward the main altar and the Pope continued to vest. For the separate Pontifical Mass, the Pope continued to Collects of the Mass the assisting Cardinals, Swiss Guards, mace bearers, Rota judges and consistorial advocates at this point formed a procession that moved to the entrance of St. Peter's tomb and began the chanting of a litany imploring God's help for the new Pontiff.

"Hearken, O God, to our prayers for our master, the Pope, Saviour of the world, help him."

After the chanting of the Epistle in Latin by the subdeacon and the Gospel by the deacon, the same were chanted in Greek by a Greek subdeacon and a Greek deacon.

Following the chanting of the "Credo" came a ceremony which has remained in the liturgy from other more insecure times when violence might be done to the popes.

After the usual preparations were made for the offering of the Mass, the papal sacrament of the three hosts for the Pope's use. One was selected by the cardinal deacon of the Mass and the other two were consumed by the sacristan in the Pope's presence. The same was done with the water and wine for the Mass with the sacristan tasting a bit of each in the Pope's presence.

The faithful filling the basilica all this glory would remind him of the sobering reality of the position of all things.

Taking in a silver basin a burning tuft of smoldering wax, the Master of Ceremonies knelt and chanted three times: "Holy Father, so passes the glory of the world."

The Pope now began the Mass, which for the most part was similar to any solemn pontifical Mass celebrated by a bishop. The Pope was assisted by Cardinal Giuseppe Capovilla, Treasurer and Cardinal Secretary of State.

After the recitation of the Canon of the Mass, the first of the special prayers was performed. Here Cardinal Canali, Dean of the Holy Roman Church, placed the white surplice upon the Pope's shoulders. Next Cardinal Tosi placed the Pope's mitre on his head and kissed him on the forehead and breast. Cardinals Capovilla and Capovilla then performed the propitiary.

The Pope received his throne which was placed in the rear center of the altar, now completely hidden by a great canopy.

At the end of the order of the Mass, the Pope left the altar and proceeded to the altar of the Holy Spirit. They were followed by Patriarchs, Archbishops, Bishops and mitred Abbots. The Mass continued as usual.

After the chanting of the who a short time before had madly cheered the Pope's entrance, now fell silently to their knees. The Guardsmen lowered their swords. The torchbearers entered the sanctuary and knelt.

Came the words of Consecration that every priest speaks in his Mass: "This is My Body... This is My Blood..." Three times the Pope elevated the Host and the chalice, to the center, to the right and to the left, kneeling before and after each triple elevation to adore the sacramental presence of Jesus Christ.

From up in the dome of the basilica the trumpet choir sounded the "Largo" of Longhi to signal each elevation.

Before the Pope received Communion he gave the ceremonial Kiss of Peace to the Cardinals assisting him in the Mass. Then this ritual embrace was passed from one to another until all clergymen present had received it.

Then with the repeated cheers on exit the procession was formed and moved through the basilica and out the main doors to the atrium, through the atrium, up the Scala Regia and into the Hall of Benedictions.

As he came into view the many thousands waiting in the Square who had been unable to enter the basilica greeted the Pope with a roar of acclaim.

The entire square became a surging mass of shouting, waving, humanity—men, women and children from every nation on the face of the earth demonstrating at the same time the universality and the unity of the Church. And in this moment, surely, of one heart and mind and voice to express their reverence and love for the occupant of Peter's Throne.

The actual coronation that followed was simple. The choir intoned the hymn "Corona Aurea Super Caput Ejus" (A Golden Crown is Placed Upon His Head).

When it was finished, Cardinal Tisserant recited the Lord's Prayer, which would be the only prayer to accompany the act of coronation.

Then Cardinal Canali, taking the tiara in both hands, raised it over the head of the enthroned Pontiff, saying: "Accept this ornate tiara of the three crowns and remember that you are Father of Princes and Kings, Pontiff of the world and Vicar of Our-Saviour Jesus Christ on this earth, whose honor and glory is forever and ever."

The Pope was crowned "Viva il Papa" (Long live the Pope) burst from half a million throats in the earth's every language. The Vicar of Christ blessed his flock.

Pope John XXIII withdrew from the balcony to begin his reign.

Vatican City — (RNS) — Described into the Italian Army during World War I, Pope John XXIII was assigned to a medical corps and given the rank of sergeant. This was the only time in his life that he wore a military uniform. Later, promoted to the rank of lieutenant, he became a chaplain with the duty of attending the sick at military hospitals.
