PREPARING TO GIVE the wine and water at the Offertory of the Mass at St. George's Lithuanian Church. Dave has been an altar boy for several years.

Our High Schoolers Leaders Of The Future

Text and Photos

By FRANK KELLY and PAUL CONTESTABLE

The younger — and so-called beat — generation has taken many a verbal lashing from its elders, often with justification.

But little, if anything, is said about the ordinary high school student who goes about his business of getting a good education so that he can fill the leader's shoes of tomorrow.

THE MAJORITY OF THE students in the high schools in the Rochester Diocese fall into this second category; youngsters with an intense desire to learn, to be respected by everyone they come in contact with.

A typical example is David Balashis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Balashis of 97 Warsaw St., Rochester. He and hundreds like him belong to their school's athletic teams, serve Mass in their parish churches, belong to school clubs, spend most of their spare time studying and some even hold part-time jobs.

Dave is a sophomore student at Aquinas Institute and a member of St. George's Lithuanian Parish, Hudson Ave., Rochester.

This 15-year-old lad is by no means "beat." A conscientious boy with a definite goal in his mind, Dave could not be classified as strictly a book worm, although he spends several hours each night in study.

AN "A" STUDENT AT Aquinas, Dave is an outstanding member of his school's IV football team where he is both an end and quarterback. He also plays basketball and baseball at the Basilian Institute.

A graduate of St. George's school, Dave wants to go to college, and eventually become a doctor. Naturally, science is his favorite subject at school.

An altar boy at St. George's Church, Dave also serves Mass at Aquinas on a full, four year scholarship and is a member of the St. Thomas More Honors Club. He would like to be a newspaper carrier, but his other activities would interfere with that work.

LIKE MOST OF HIS fellow students, he is helpful around the house. His day follows a definite schedule as to home study. This habit is to study immediately after dinner each night for about three hours.

With so much time devoted to sports, Dave doesn't have too much free time — and certainly no time to fool around with gangs. He reads as much as is possible and takes in a movie every once in a while.

With such a busy schedule, Dave has no time to get into trouble — just as the greatest majority of students have no time to "fool around."

Dave is just one example of the typical Catholic high school student that can be found by the thousands in the Catholic high schools in the Rochester Diocese.

They are students who will not be found on street corners or in teen gangs. They will be found in libraries, studying at home, helping their parents and being a credit to both their homes and schools.

BECOMING A GOOD football player for his school is also one of Dave's ambitions. Here he is shown with Hank Vadas, coach of the Aquinas JV squad.

IN THE CLASSROOM, Dave Balashis gives serious attention to the notes on his desk, as do his fellow classmates.
