Leaders Of The Future

Text and Photos

By FRANK KELLY and PAUL CONTESTABLE

The younger — and so-called beat — generation has taken many a verbal lashing from its elders, often with justification.

But little, if anything, is said about the ordinary high school student who goes about his business of getting a good education so that he can fill the leader's shoes of tomorrow.

THE MAJORITY OF THE students in the high schools in the Rochester Diocese fall into this second category, youngsters with an intense desire to learn, to be respected by everyone they come in contact with.

A typical example is David Bahishis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Bahishis of 97 Warsaw St., Elba, brother. He and hundreds like him belong to their school's athletic teams, serve Mass in their parish churches, belong to school clubs, spend most of their spare time studying and some even hold part-time jobs.

Dave is a sophomore student at Aquinas Institute and a member of St. George's Lithuanian Parish, Hudson Ave., Rochester. This 15-year-old lad is by far more serious than he is classified as. He is a good student with the intent of becoming a doctor one day.

AN "A" STUDENT AT Aquinas, Dave is a member of many of his school's organizations, plays football and basketball and enjoys checkers. He also plays golf, tennis and ping-pong at the Bushnell Institute.

A graduate of St. George's School, he is now attending college and eventually became a doctor. Aquinas School is his favorite school at school.

An altar boy at St. George's School, he is the son of the Rev. Msgr. Aquinas. While he is a good student, he is not a natural athlete.

This is Mr. Aquinas' second year as an altar boy and is a member of the St. Thomas More Club. He would like to be a newspaper editor when he grows up. His hobbies would include writing poems.

LIKE MOST OF HIS fellow students, Dave is an applied student. His day follows a rigid pattern, time to time study. His hobby is to study marine safety, which can teach him about other trades.

With so much time dedicated to school, Dave finds it necessary to find time for his hobbies. He is a member of the Aquinas band.

With such a busy schedule, Dave has no time to get into trouble—just as the greatest majority of students have no time to fool around.

Dave is just one example of the many good students that can be found in the Aquinas High School.

They are students who will not be found in the school halls in the evenings. They will be found in libraries, studying, or helping their parents and brothers and sisters to do their share of work.
