'Hero' Of German-Italian Film

FATHER MARIO Borelli of Naples, Italy, counsels two bell-hop admirers while on a visit to Munich for the premiere of a movie depicting the story of the "House of Uterlings" which he founded for homeless boys from Naples' slums. The German-Italian film, called "Don Vesuvio and the House of the Idiots," shows how Father Borelli became a "bum" eight years ago to mix with the unwanted youngsters. After winning their confidence, the priest revealed himself and offered the youths "bread, shelter and love." Today, more than 1,500 boys have lived in the "House" which was converted from an old abandoned church.

'Song Of Bernadette' Movie Of Lourdes Returns To Screen

"The Song of Bernadette" returns to the Rochester scene this week at the Fine Arts Theatre, South Ave. at Gregory St., in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of the miracle at Lourdes.

The movie, starring Jennifer Jones, is one of two A-1 (Unobjectionable for general patronage) movies currently billed at a major theatre in Rochester that do not have an objectionable second feature.

THE MOVIE is recommended by the Courier-Journal as an excellent means of family entertainment over the weekend. Free parking is available opposite the Fine Arts Theatre.

The 15-year-old movie was released through the efforts of the Catholic Audio Visual Educators Association.

A Certain Householder A certain householder put a sign on her doorbell reading: "To ring the bell put a dime in the slot. Money will not be returned to solicitors."

One night, however, the ropes became entangled, and the curtain hung suspended about three feet above the "dead" man. A gonging minutes passed while desperate efforts were made to free the ropes and bring the curtain down. Finally the corpse got slowly to its feet and in gusty tones muttered, "No rest, even in death." With that, he pulled down the curtain and left the stage.
