Actor Attributes Success To St. Jude

Danny Thomas is a comedian who can make you cry and, at the same time, is a serious man who can make you laugh. Pete Martin observes in the current (Jan. 17) issue of The Saturday Evening Post.

Martin's article, "I Call on Danny Thomas," tells how these diverse talents have paid off for Danny, whose "clean and wholesome" CBS-family-type TV show went to the top of the Trendex ratings in November, topping some rugged competitors.

It also tells that the 42-year-old comedian, a deeply religious man, was "bored" about telling his story because he would have to describe his "special feeling" for St. Jude.

"I'll have to tell you what St. Jude has done for me, and what I'm trying to do for him," Thomas said. "An interview geared to faith might bug some people, so if anybody thinks faith is nonsense they'd better stop right here. I'm not a pious man who is always on his knees. I'm not trying to convert anybody. I pray the only way I know how, strictly informal."

The Post article tells that Thomas is of Lebanese descent and was born in Deerfield, Michigan. He was christened Muzzyad.

AMONG WOMEN Successful Family Life

By Mary Lennon Snyder

To discover the secret of successful family life has been the object of a survey by two American sociologists at the University of Chicago. Lucius F. Cervantes, S.J., director of the department of sociology at Regis College, Denver, Colorado, and Carlo C. Zimmerman, a sociologist at Harvard University.

This study has continued for several years and has been subsidized in part by the Ford Foundation. From a preliminary report published by Father Cervantes the following information is taken.

The study was carried on in six large cities and two smaller communities: Los Angeles, Denver, Omaha, St. Louis, New Orleans, Boston, Stillwater, Okla., and Morgantown, W. Va. The investigation involved over 80,000 families and a quarter of a million individuals.

"We arranged the families in each city according to whether their primary friends who visited with them have one or more things in common. We found that the best and most successful families and the happiest ones, had most in common with their friends, and the least successful and least happy ones had little or nothing in common with their friends.

HAPPINESS and success were measured by indices of divorce, desertion, juvenile arrest, in having a reproductive number of children and continuance of children in the educational process.

"In Denver, for instance, families of the high school seniors (and our study included both public and Catholic schools) who had friends with whom they had nothing in common had a juvenile arrest rate which was more than twelve times higher than those families who had friends with whom they had four characteristics in common. The Denver families with nothing in common with their most intimate friends had a divorce or desertion rate four times as high as those with very similar friends."

At a later date I shall give more of the findings which brought Father Cervantes to this statement: "For those who have not yet married: Marry your own—whether of the same religion, region ethnic group, or education and economic status. For those who have already married: Protect your own by gathering about you family friends of similar backgrounds, interests, and ideals."

DOINGS AT THE DALY'S Dodging The Blues

By Mary Tinley Daly

The headline, "Be a Joiner to Avoid Neurosis" struck our eye. We read further. It was an account of a paper prepared by Prof. R. C. Barnes and J. C. Munch of Hahnemann Medical College, Philadelphia, and presented before the American Association for the Advancement of Science. The professors gave findings of the behavior of white mice and rats rendered neurotic by solitary confinement — being placed in solid walled cages, having no contact with their own kind and a minimum of contact with the experimenters.

Upshot was, that after such isolation — for periods of a few days to a year — both mice and rats went "stir crazy." Mice developed the shakes, epilepsies and some even committed suicide. Rats became violently angry, attacking everything put within the cages.

"WE HEARD ON:" The speaker drew the conclusion that since man is a social animal, he should avoid isolation, and that to join all sorts of organizations is the best way to keep "psychologically stable."

Well... We thought of some of the people we know who normally would be in the equivalent of "solid walled cages" or at least semi-solid walled ones: the retired, those without families or close personal ties.

Some try to "draw the days out" by making late, making a big thing of daily small chores, afternoon excursion to the grocery store — often pathetically engaging fellow-customers in talk over the quality of the string beans.

Others, with a bit more cash, develop epiphenomenal symptoms that drive them from one doctor to another, giving rise to the saying between two such patients meeting in a doctor's office: "If he ever cures me, I don't know what I'm going to do with my Wednesday afternoons!"

Loneliness — it's a frightening thing... And we thought of others we know — also who could live in "walled-in cages."

Once Over Lightly Set By 3 Groups

"Once Over Lightly," a musical revue will be presented Jan. 23, 24 and 25 at Holy Redeemer Auditorium, Hudson at Clifford avenues at 8:30 p.m.

Comprising representative talents of Music Theatre, Ballet Workshop and Catholic Theatre, the large cast includes: Lloyd Hubbard, Julie Frances, Harold Noyak, Pat Sumberg, Lily Hope Lyon, Donald O'Neill, Mary Williams, Bud Briggs, Mrs. Raymond Vorniran, Stephen Tuttle, Earl Kage and many others.

Unit directors are Sue Wigg, Robert Smet, Frank Riesenberger, Aloha McVinnie, Eugene Bocket, Thelma Biracree and William Andia.

Frank Riesenberger is producing and Carl Zollo has designed the settings.

Patrons of Catholic Theatre are reminded that admission to "Once Over Lightly" is not included in the Season Subscription. Their remaining subscribers' ticket is good for admission to "Othello" and "The Madwoman of Chailot."
