Mercy's 'Quill' Rated 'Tops'

The Quill, student publication of Our Lady of Mercy High School, has merited one of the two national CSMC press awards, given for the first time this year. This announcement by Msgr. Edward A. Prebing, Executive Chairman of the CSMC, came on Feb. 28, the last day of Catholic Press Month. The Student Press Paladin Award is a special award from the CSMC honor society, the Order of Crusade Paladins.

THE QUILL received the award in recognition for the best single presentation of the mission apostolate during the scholastic year 1958-1959. The other award, presented to Twin Towers of Providence High School, Chicago, is for the best continuing department dealing with the mission apostolate.

The Rochester high school paper, published by the journalism class, received this award specifically for the issue of November 13, 1958, in which two entire pages were devoted to mission problems, personalities, and activities.

IN TESTIMONY of the honor The Quill may display a special insignia in their newspaper. Personal Press Paladin citations were awarded to the students who wrote or designed the prize winning issue.

Mercy students who earned this award are Joyce Flannery, Roberta Fisher, Mary Flanagan, Maureen Hillard, Jacqueline Legler, Patricia Madigan, Ann Price, Mary Ann Wheeler, and Kathy Zilloux.

The ability of the article to arouse or develop interest in the missions and to encourage readers to effective participation in the mission apostolate was one of the chief factors considered by the judges. Equally important was the accuracy of the information about the mission work of the Church.

FEATURED IN THE prize winning publication of THE QUILL was an editorial by Ann Price concerning spiritual gifts for the missions. "This gift," she wrote, "cannot be touched put-on, or cast-off, yet it fulfills the needs of both hunger and nakedness. It feeds the starving soul with the nourishment of life and clothes the naked with the knowledge of Christ."
