Charles O'Brien Named Notre Dame 'Man Of Year'

"Notre Dame Man of the Year Award for 1959" was presented to Charles J. O'Brien of 156 Evandale Rd., Brighton at the Universal Notre Dame Night dinner of the local alumni, Saturday, April 4 at Oak Hill Country Club.

Difficulties of entering the university in the fall were cited by James E. Armstrong, executive secretary of the Notre Dame Alumni Association, guest speaker. He said the university plans no increase to its 6,000 student enrollment.

With more students wanting to get into college, the competition will be more intensive than ever before, he said.

O'Brien who received an illuminated scroll from Victor A. DeSimon, last year's recipient is employed at George D. B. Bonright and Co. He has been in charge of the local branch of the Notre Dame Foundation for the past five years.

John F. Burke was installed as president of the Rochester Club. Named with him were: Donald J. Corbett, vice president; James S. Doyle, secretary and John C. Casey, treasurer. President John R. Klee presided.
