

Mission Sister shows native nurse how to treat toothache.

Pulling Teeth For Souls

Here are more pictures of progress in the Tanganyika outpost of the Medical Missionaries of Mary, Irish-founded order of nuns. Rochester dentist, Dr. Paul S. Lalonde, of 277 Lake View Park, spent January to June teaching dentistry techniques to the nuns and caring for natives' toothaches.

This was the fourth six-months trip to the East African Tanganyika missions for the 60-year-old dentist who is home until December to care for his Rochester patients.

To channel aid and contributions to the nuns, Dr. Lalonde has organized a Guild with annual dues of $1. Details may be obtained from Rev. George S. Wood, moderator, or Mrs. J. P. Kenny of Gharwood Rd., Pittsford.

The doctor's Kodachrome pictures were processed in black-and-white for newspaper reproduction by Joseph Siplo.

Latest equipment glitters in remodeled operating room.

Nurses dormitory building is a mission-built edifice, even bricks were baked in the mission's own kilns. Window sashes are metal, roof beams specially treated to resist ants and termites.

The Boston Archbishop declared that the thinking behind the Soviet Premier's mid-September visit is based on the philosophy that "the front is everywhere; anything goes; whatever advances their cause is legitimate."

"Every foreign visitor of any rank who has come or will come to this country from behind the Iron Curtain is a master of deceit," he added. "He is by long and thorough training the best equipped soldier for a warfare of words and treachery and anything else short of the firing of atomic weapons."

Convention

Knights Told Avoid Trivial

St. Louis—(NC)—Knights of Columbus attending their 77th international convention here were urged to become "mediators between the Church and the world" by means of the lay apostolate.

Bishop John P. Cody of Kansas City-St. Joseph, Mo., urged the knights not to waste the resources of their organization on "the pursuit of the trivial." He told them: "As individuals, you cannot rest in your efforts to know Christ and to make Him known to others."

Some 3,000 persons attended the convention of the 1,200,000-member Catholic men's fraternal society.

The Bishop described the "more profound realization of the nature of the Church" reached by so many members of the laity as one of "the great advances made by the Church within recent decades."

Included in this deeper realization of the nature of the Church, he said, is "a fuller understanding of the position of the Christian laity."

"To be a Christian is not simply to believe in the word of God revealed in Christ, nor is it simply to obey the moral code proclaimed by Christ, nor is it simply an imitation of Christ," the speaker explained. "It is all of these things, but it is something much more. In essence it is being one with Christ."

"We who are members of the mystical Christ—we who are sons of God in Christ, also share in His prophetic, kingly and priestly mission," Bishop Cody said.
