

Nuns' College Dedication Sunday

"It is a special favor of God to be teachers destined to train little ones in His knowledge and love. That statement of Mother McAuley, founder of the Sisters of Mercy, will be the motto for student-nuns in their new Catherine McAuley college building on Blossom Road, Brighton.

Bishop Kearney will dedicate the steel-frame $1,350,000 building Sunday, Nov. 8, at 4 p.m. Mother M. Magdalene, mother general of the Mercy nuns, and Kenneth T. Moran, state education department official, will also be speakers at the rite.

MOTHER MAGDALENE said the just completed structure will enable young nuns to complete a third year of study toward their college degree before being assigned to staff classrooms throughout the Diocese.

Prior to this arrangement, nuns returned to the motherhouse on holidays and during summer periods to complete two years of college studies. Next September, 24 senior students will remain at the college for their junior year. The new college unit will encourage high standards of scholarship, continuous study and research, Mother Magdalene said.

The young nuns will then spend their final college year at a major college or return for summer sessions at the Catherine McAuley college.

THE NEW BUILDING has been built as a west wing of Our Lady of Mercy Motherhouse and designed to harmonize with the east wing which serves as Mercy high school for over 900 pupils.

Besides the college facilities for nuns, the new wing will also house the reading laboratory, testing and guidance center and speech clinic which have a record of eight years of service to over 4,000 students of all grades. The wing also contains a library, laboratories, music and art rooms, an almshouse, recreation, administration and classroom facilities.

The new wing will also relieve crowded conditions in the Motherhouse to care for aged and infirm nuns of the order.

Prominent educators and college heads will attend Sunday's ceremony, scheduled to be presided over by Sister Catherine Francis, president, College of Saint Rose, Albany; Sister Mary Jane, Mount Saint Joseph, Buffalo; Mother Mary Vincenta, Santa Maria College, Buffalo; Dr. William J. Litterick, Kenilworth College, Buffalo.

Also Rev. John E. Coleman, Dean of Niagara University; Sister Miriam Thomas, Maryknoll College for Sisters; Mother Mary Paradisa, Santa Maria College; Sister Mary Gracia, Mercy College, Tarrytown.

Mother Adelbert and Sister Lucretia, Marywood College, Erie, Pa., will be in charge of the altar.

Sister Noreen and Sister Peter show Sister Marie Catherine, novice (white veil), and postulant Sister Judith Morgan library techniques used in Mercy nuns' new Catherine McAuley junior college library.

Scranton; Mother Joan of Arc, State Department of Education, Philadelphia; Sister Adiana Marie, of the Allegheny Sisters of Saint Francis; Dr. Frank Kille, Associate Commissioner of Higher Education, New York; Mother Mary Camilla, Mother Mary Antonia, and Sister Mary Martin, with Mother Mary Magdalene and Sister Mary de Pazzi, Dean of the college.

Father Richard Tormey, chaplain, is in charge of the dedication, will represent New York's Mary Camilla, Mother Mary Antonia, and Sister Mary Martin, with Mother Mary Magdalene and Sister Mary de Pazzi, Dean of the college.

MAN AT LEISURE

Joe's father put in a 50- to 60-hour week and seldom had a day off - much less a chance to enjoy the kind of fishing trip Joe takes regularly.

Like the average American industrial worker, Joe produces more in less time than his father did - or more than any other industrial worker in the world today. On his job during the year, Joe has 25,000 kilowatt-hours of electrical energy to help him - the energy equivalent of 367 manual helpers.

Modern electrified industries mean more high-quality production and a higher standard of living for everyone. To make sure industries, stores, farms and homes have all the electricity they need, we have built more than $240,000,000 of new electrical facilities in the last ten years. In fact, during that decade, we have more than doubled the amount invested in electrical plant and equipment to serve our customers.

Construction to meet future needs is, of course, continuous and we are proud of a partnership with industry, business, farms and homes that helps to keep the area we serve progressive and prosperous.
