New Magazine For Parents

"Know", a new magazine designed to provide direction to parents in broadening their own education and in guiding the intellectual growth of their children, was introduced to the public this week. Archbishop Boland of Newark has written the introduction to the preview edition which has a total circulation of approximately 35,000 copies in twelve dioceses.

The magazine will present a program of family formation through reading. It has been endorsed by the Northeast Province of the School Sisters of Notre Dame.

"Know" will be published bi-monthly during the school year and will be available only through schools or parish societies. The subscription rate is $1.00 per year. It is produced by Associated Catholic Publishers, 1270 Sixth Avenue, Rockefeller Center, New York.

St. Boniface Tops Goal

Pledges totaling $265,322 — $65,000 more than the minimum goal — were obtained in the parishwide fund drive for the new St. Boniface Church building, Gregory Street, the Rev. Francis J. Taylor, pastor, announced Tuesday.

Aim of the drive was to meet a portion of the costs for the new edifice, which is expected to be ready for occupancy in January. It replaces the former towered Gothic church which was destroyed by fire in 1937.

In a message to parishioners lauding them for their "tremendous loyalty and sacrifice," Father Taylor termed the pledge total "a remarkable success" particularly because it came only two and a half years after another campaign during which more than $220,000 had been pledged.

Higher Learning

Puno, Peru — The Maryknoll Fathers here have opened what is probably the highest Catholic bookstore in the world.

Located in the two-and-one-half mile high parish of San Juan Bautista in the heart of the Andes Mountains, the bookstore is already supplying great quantities of Catholic literature printed in Quechua and Aymara — ancient Indian languages still spoken by the majority of the inhabitants in this 40,000 member parish.

"Although many of the Indians are illiterate, the bookstore sold 4,000 copies of a new Aymara prayerbook in a week," says Father Vincent T. Mallon, M.M., of Brooklyn, N.Y. "The Indians have such a love for their religion that the literate tribesmen gather their friends in mud-walled, candle lit huts at night and read prayers and hymns from their own book."

U.S. Prelate To Be Rota Dean

Vatican City—(NC)—The Sacred Roman Rota, Church high court which deals with marriage cases, will get its first American dean on December 14 when Msgr. Francis J. Brennan succeeds to the senior post.

Msgr. Brennan, 65, a priest of the Archdiocese of Philadelphia, has worn the ermine-trimmed robe of a Rota auditor since 1940, when he became the first American ever named to the court. He became dean automatically on the elevation of the present senior judge of the court, Scottish-born Msgr. William T. Heard, who was radically altered by the loss of the temporal power of the papacy in 1870.

Counting Msgr. Heard, three of the four immediate predecessors of Msgr. Brennan as Rota deans have been chosen to become Princes of the Church.

The tribunal of the Rota is one of the oldest bodies of the Holy See, antedating even the curial congregations. Referred to during the Middle Ages as "the Supreme Court of the Christian World," its status among equals.

Sell Anything, Advises Lawyer In Smut Hassle
Chicago — (NC) — A priest and an attorney who specializes in censorship cases offered sharply conflicting advice here to 350 magazine distributors.

MSGR. THOMAS J. Fitzgerald, executive director of the National Office for Decent Literature, stated: "We are not going to clean up this mess on our own. The priest and the lawyer willingly must be the common panel at the convention of the Mid-America Periodical Distributors Association in the Pick Congress Hotel."

Stanley Fleishman, a Hollywood attorney, gave this advice: "You must distribute as wide as possible the material available to you, including that which you don't like. You must resist like the plague efforts of decency" must be the guide.

Reds Woo Young Nations; U.S. Lags

(Continued from Page 1) The greater charity is to help people to help themselves. Programs of education, technical assistance, and development aid, now being carried out both by individual governments and by international bodies can do much to build the foundations for prosperity and peace in nations suffering from poverty and hunger.

At the same time, the bishops insisted that since the cause of peace and freedom is so intimately connected with the independence of nations, we would be better served in the long run if we could rely less upon programs of governmental aid and more on private investment and international trade adequately regulated for the good of all nations.

However, they said, "the needs of the world will not be met by charitable aid alone. That is in view of such serious problems as the pressure of populations in some areas upon resources, the world-wide need for co-operation and development of goodwill to step up production and distribution of goods and services to our system of freedom and peace under God."

The potential abundance made possible by modern technology, the bishops added, "should be made a reality, as a result of programs inspired by our love for our fellow man and the quest for peace and freedom."

In the concluding section of their statement, the bishops focused attention on the United States, declaring that "ultimate responsibility for the materialistic philosophy of Communism as a threat to peace and freedom will be met only when we exemplify the principles that we proclaim as Christian members of a nation dedicated to the minds of men."
