Lady Chatterley's Lover — Love Is My Profession — Question of Adultery

A silent night ...a father's thoughts

It's late . . . way past 12. The house is so quiet. At that, we have things finished pretty early this year.

Best tree we've ever had. The presents look good. Grace makes pretty packages. Wish we could afford a bike for Tommy. Maybe next year. I guess a father always wants to give his kids more than he can.

A lot of things look different when you have a child. Like what the school board does. What happens in Washington. And the UN.

Will he grow up in a world at peace—or at war? Will he be really free—or like the children in countries where the government runs everything? What is it they say? "Liberty is every American's birthright."

A man wants to give his son the best of everything. A chance to feel free and independent. To make up his own mind and work out his own life. No "isms" to worry him. And peace—certainly peace.

A good world to live in, that's it. And part of that is up to me and all of us. Most of all—people who have children. That brings it pretty close to the Christmas message, a Child makes all the difference.

Joy To The World

New York—(RNS)—Cardinal Spellman's offer of a rubber doll of Popeye, the sailor who dotes on spinach, fails to calm this crying tot at the New York archbishop's annual Christmas party for children of the New York Foundling Hospital. An extra helping of candy succeeded in quieting the youngster, however, and he and some 60 other children went on to enjoy the party. Cardinal Spellman left New York later to attend the Consistory in the Vatican and also to start his annual Christmas tour to servicemen overseas.

Governor Seeks Schools' Link With Religion

New York — (RNS) — Gov. Nelson Rockefeller said here he hopes "more and more persons with religious backgrounds" will become teachers and administrators in New York State's educational system.

"It is important that those who teach our young people be persons who understand that knowledge is of value only insofar as it is in accord with the spiritual truths inherent in our Judeo-Christian tradition," the governor said.

"While we in the United States have wisely decreed that Church and State shall be kept separate and that public education shall not become the vehicle for any one religious faith, this does not mean that there is no connection between religion and education," he declared.

Speaking at the 150th anniversary dinner of the New York Bible Society, Gov. Rockefeller declared that "there are no two subjects of greater importance to our present and future than religion and education."

He strongly endorsed the state's policy of "released time" for religious instruction of school children, but emphasized that "religion starts in the home—in family prayers, blessings before meals, and the example set by God-fearing parents to their children." Gov. Rockefeller, a Baptist, is a member of Riverside Church, New York.

"Released time alone," the governor said, "has not been able to serve the needs of all our children for moral and spiritual guidance." Unhappily, many children and parents have failed to take advantage of the opportunity to receive this guidance." Since 1940, New York State has granted public school students a weekly one-hour authorized absence, upon parents' application, to attend religious instruction classes in a nearby church or synagogue.

Discussing the interdependence of religion and education in providing moral guidance, he said: "It is for the church to provide the religious and spiritual leadership that helps both parents and children to worship God and model their conduct on the precepts which link our whole society together in a seamless web of the dead, the living and the unborn.

"And it is for the school to teach our children that truth is indivisible, that nothing that endures can be built upon falsehood or deception, and that the same principles that illumine the lives of good men and women down the ages are indispensable to the business of daily life, to industry, trade and the professional services."

Floating Home

Puno, Peru — Maria is one elderly lady who believes in the motto, "Always be prepared."

Recently the 80-year-old granny ambled into the Maryknoll mission here and asked to receive the Last Rites.

When Father Vincent T. Mallon, M.M., of Brooklyn, told her she didn't look sick to him, the wise, little lady explained she was taking no chances. She lived on one of the floating islands in the middle of Lake Titicaca and she feared she would die without a priest.

Father Mallon agreed and Maria knelt in the chapel and received Communion and, by reason of her advanced age, Extreme Unction. With a smile of contentment she thanked the padre and ambled off to her island home.

Britain Ponders Tax On Schools

London — (NC) — The Church in Britain faces a serious financial threat following a government committee's recommendation that Catholic church and school buildings be taxed. At present, such buildings are exempt from all taxes.

The suggestion to tax them came in the report submitted for government adoption by a committee of the Ministry of Housing and Local Government. The report was on current taxation of "charities."

The committee proposed that such "charities" as voluntary schools — which include most of the Catholic schools within the state education system — pay 50 per cent of their taxable value. A similar tax would apply to church buildings.

Up Near The North Pole

Father Bernard Brown, Oblate priest from Rochester, is superior of St. John's Mission at Fort McMurray, Alberta, Canada. His Eskimo charges, fur clad, visit his outpost at Inuvik's first chapel in the land where Christmas is night all day.

More On Population

Prelate Assails 'Forebodings'

Birmingham — (NC) — William Cardinal Godfrey said Catholics cling to the "unassailable truth that in whatever way population may be limited, it cannot be by using a method that runs counter to God's natural law."

The Archbishop of Westminster, England's only resident Cardinal, told a big Catholic rally that the "dismal forebodings" that the world's population may outrun its resources may be proven wrong by a discovery of science, which has been "so remarkably successful in recent years."

Cardinal Godfrey also reminded of Catholic teachings on chastity and restraint, saying:

"Our moral teaching takes into account the powerful grace of God who will not allow temptation to be so great that we cannot grapple with it and gain the victory."

THE PRELATE said: "It is God's will that governs the world and we are His people. We cling to the unassailable truth that in whatever way population may be limited it cannot be by using any method that runs counter to God's natural law. That would be to choose sin as a remedy."

The Cardinal also referred to the forthcoming East-West summit conference, expressing admiration for all efforts made in the cause of true peace.

The Cardinal stated his conviction that while the "present wave of optimism regarding international relationships (is) a very soothing influence, (it) must be tempered by the thought that the enemies of religion have not, as far as we can see, moved away from their declared program of aggression against the Church of God."

Vast Aid Shipped To Missions

New York — (RNS) — About 364,450 pounds of medical and surgical supplies were shipped to 500 mission stations overseas during the year ending Nov. 30 by the Catholic Medical Mission Board here.

The report was presented at the board's annual meeting by Father Edward F. Garesche, S.J., president and director, who pointed out that the new total topped last year's record by more than 120,000 pounds.

Meanwhile, Father Anthony F. LaBau, S.J., assistant director, said that thousands of children in 37 countries benefitted during the year from the board's increased emphasis on preventive medicines.

"Not only are we shipping overseas great quantities of medicines for every disease imaginable, but we also are putting high priority on supplying dietary and nutritional supplements," he observed.

For example, he said, at a cost of 55 cents per child, the board provides a week's supply of formula and vitamin supplements for babies in maternity clinics, nurseries and orphanages in various parts of the world.
