Queens Student Paper Said Nazi In Style

Flushing — (NC) — The student newspaper at Queens College "is falling into a pattern of anti-Catholicism" similar to tactics the nazis used, the Newman Club chaplain at the tax-supported institution charged.

Father Vincent A. Brown, the Newman Club chaplain, in a letter to the student newspaper, said a recent article on birth control "set up a number of straw men, many of them irrelevant to the problem of birth control, but all of them revealing a pathetic prejudice against the Catholic Church."

THREE EXAMPLES of bias in Queens College student publications previously had been protested by the state Catholic War Veterans, the diocesan Holy Name Union, the diocesan Catholic Teacher Association and the Tablet, Brooklyn diocesan newspaper.

As a result, the college administrative committee promised "positive, affirmative action." It requested a bylaw or resolution which would empower municipal college presidents to act when offensive material appears in print. However, the Board of Higher Education ruled no new regulation was necessary, although no action has been taken at Queens College.

If this is what free speech has degenerated into on the college level, he concluded, it reflects "a failure in our educational system."

'A' Student-Ace Skater

By PAUL CONTESTABLE

Skating and studies get equal time with Eastern States Speed Skating champion Janice Smith, an honor student at St. Agnes High School. Janice will participate in the National Skating Meet to be held Jan. 30 and 31 in St. Paul, Minn.

Janice, who won her first race at Cobbs Hill Park in 1957, is currently enrolled as a freshman at St. Agnes High where she maintains a 90 plus average. She earned a scholarship to the high school last spring while attending Our Lady of Good Counsel School.

In 1958 she took the city juvenile title and the Niagara Frontier Meet at Fort Erie, Ontario. Last year she won the Eastern States title, the Middle Atlantic, Western New York and the International Meet at Barrie, Ontario.

At the National Indoor Meet at Champaign, Ill., in the 440 event she fell, and, despite this, she was able to get up and place third in the race. She took second place for the meet. In December she won the Plattsburg Meet and two weeks ago set a new record at Saratoga for the 880.

Homework always takes first place with Janice, however. When her assignments are completed, she may be found at Genesee Valley Rink or Cobbs Hill with her coaches Tony Callipere, Eddie Leppla and George Blackburn going through a strict practice routine.

Extra-curricular activities at school also share the time with Janice. She is active in the Sodality, on the homeroom basketball team, in the Junior Red Cross, and Catholic Student Mission Crusade. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Smith of Ravenwood Ave., are also active in the school's parents organizations.

When Janice's friends told her they would pray that she would win at the National Meet this week-end, she replied, "Oh no, don't pray that I win . . . there may be someone more deserving. Just pray that I don't fall down."

Carmelite Convent To Open In Sweden

Glumslov — (NC) — The Swedish government has approved a petition submitted by Carmelite nuns here for the establishment of a cloistered convent.

The nuns will now set up the first contemplative convent in the country in 365 years. The government's decision was made at this time because several Swedish young women want to enter the Carmelite Order.

SIX CARMELITE nuns came here from Ghent, Belgium, in June, 1956, to start the first foundation of their community in Sweden since the Reformation. During the Middle Ages a large Carmelite monastery was located at nearby Landskrona.

Sweden's last monastery at Vadstena, belonging to the congregation founded by St. Bridget of Sweden in 1344, was closed in 1595. An extensive restoration of the ruins of this foundation is now being carried out by the Swedish government.

Prior to 1595, cloisters had existed in the country early in the 12th century.

Franciscan Friars Return To Mt. Zion Monastery

Jerusalem — (NC) — The Israeli government has told the Franciscan Friars that they are now free to return to their Ad Coenaculum (Near the Cenacle) monastery near the site of Christ's Last Supper.

The Israeli government has also agreed to pay for repairs to the war-damaged building.

The announcement was made here by the Religious Affairs Ministry.

The Franciscan monastery is located on Mt. Zion adjoining the spot where Jesus is traditionally believed to have eaten the Last Supper. It is also directly across from the walls of the old city of Jerusalem which now form the border between Israel and Jordan.

The actual room of the Last Supper is in a building on Mt. Zion occupied for centuries by Moslems. The room itself was used for Moslem religious ceremonies until it was taken over by Israel, which still recognizes the building as Moslem property.

Danger Overhead

Shumacho, Yucatan — Mayan Indians here have a custom of decorating the Church altar with produce from their fields as thanksgiving for a good harvest.

Recently, as Father Robert E. Lee, Maryknoll Missioner from Brooklyn, N.Y. began Mass the altar was cluttered with corn, squash, tomatoes, cucumbers, and quite unorthodoxly someone added a live goat and several pigeons on the side.

But what caused the Brooklyn Maryknoller the most concern was when he looked up and saw a tremendous watermelon tied rather precariously from a rafter directly over his head.
