I doubt if there is a single family that has not been happier and better adjusted for living in "a home of their own". There is pride and security and satisfaction that can never be achieved in a rented home or apartment.

There is every evidence that the cost of a home will rise in the future as it has in the past. It is self-evident then, that the time to buy is right now. You will not only attain the happiest kind of living conditions, but rising prices will increase the equity in the years to come.

I honestly believe that the wisest investment you can make is a Schantz home. This purchase is so important, you cannot afford to gamble on inferior materials or construction. A low-cost "bargain" home could be the most expensive "saving" you ever made.

It is true that our prices for such fine quality are low, because of the large volume of construction. But we will never compromise with lower workmanship, materials or individual attention. We take a personal interest in every home we build, and every Schantz home-owner will tell you that dollar for dollar there is no better value.
