Watching The Screen

Psycho Fiction

By RAY SMITH

If you see someone walking around in a daze on Clinton Avenue North, it is because the person has just come from the Palace Theatre where, with other ADULTS ONLY, he saw "THE HYPNOTIC EYE" starring the handsome French Basque actor, Jacques Bergerac.

Purporting to show the dangers of hypnotism when handled irresponsibly, this lurid mystery melodrama traces the horrible facial self-mutilation of several pretty girls to the influence of a popular Stage hypnotist and his woman assistant.

THE STORY throws out the window science fiction and ushers in psycho-fiction. It is fraught with violence and horror. Remember this and that it is still for Adults Only. Let the kiddies stay home and watch TV. Persons who like their placid hours shaken up a bit will experience an assault on mind and nerves in this malpractice of hypnotism.

Allison Hayes, portraying Bergerac's beautiful assistant, mesmerizes the victims into self-disfigurement to avenge her own ugliness (she wears a life-like mask). The handsome hypnotist's cooperation in the gruesome venture is never explained, but that's only one of the holes in the script.

The city where they give performances is in the grip of a terrible crime wave. Relief comes to the shuddering town when calm Joe Patridge in the role of a detective sergeant comes on the job counseled by clear thinking Guy Prescott, his physician-psychiatrist friend.

The film depends heavily on its tricks and its shock. At the end, a final warning is given to the evils of hypnotism in unscrupulous hands or for entertainment, and the need to confine its use to legitimate practitioners.

A LONE STORY of the East and the West developed in exotic surroundings in India during World War II is the screen attraction for ADULTS ONLY at the Paramount Theatre under the name of "THE WIND CANNOT READ." Dirk Bogarde, a British aviator, attending Japanese language classes in Delhi as preparation for interrogating prisoners of war, is charmed by his lovely teacher, Yoko Tani. Their shy courtship unfolds in colorful bazaars, majestic palaces, the pink city of Jaipur and the perfection of the Taj Mahal. For a warm 100 minute story, see this one.

The morbidly curious fans of ditto Tennessee Williams may wish to waste their time in attending the Loew's Theatre showing of the "R" movie, "The Fugitive Kind." It's just junk from stud row.

ELMIRA — I just don't like work, so "WAKE ME WHEN IT'S OVER" at the Elmira Theatre for ADULTS AND ADOLESCENTS. It's thoroughly enjoyable comedy and for 126 minutes you can't go wrong. But you will draw a dud if you trouble yourself to see the "R" movie "The Fugitive Kind" at the same Theatre starting next Wednesday. At the Colonial Theatre "THE LAST ANGRY MAN" for the WHOLE FAMILY begins Sunday. It's a beautiful drama with very fine acting.

HORNELL — You have nothing to be proud of at the Majestic Theatre for the whole week because they're keeping the "R" movie, "Who Was That Lady?" It's too bad that good people won't be enjoying good entertainment for a whole week.
