Prayers In Glass

New Windows In Newark

By REV. CHARLES BAUER

Enhanced by the soft hues of light from its new stained glass windows, the Chapel of Saint Theresa at Newark State School is now complete in every detail. Each of the windows is a petition in glass for the patients whom the Chapel serves.

Carrying out the theme which begins with the inscription on the canopy over the altar, "My Lord and My God", each window is surmounted by a little prayer: "Angel of God, guard us", "Mother of God, Guide us", "Father of Youth, Help Us".

THE SANCTUARY window is highlighted by a panel of the traditional "Guardian Angel" watching over the two children. The window in the nave contains three small panels. These are filled with angels and little children, and are predominated by Our Lady adoring the Infant Jesus.

The center of the window is inscribed with the New Testament passage warning us not to despise "one of these little ones" whose angels always behold the face of the Father in heaven. At the rear of the Chapel, the rays of the setting sun filter through the figure of Saint John Bosco, "The Father of Youth," embracing a group of little children.

In the Chapel door, three panels represent Christ with the children and His words, "Let the little children come to me."

The emphasis on childhood and youth is particularly appropriate in the Chapel of "The Little Flower" and is indicative of the fact that the patients in an institution for the retarded, regardless of their age, are all children in mind and heart.

The Guardian Angel and Saint John Bosco windows were donated by the Mission Units of Nazareth Academy and Saint Agnes High School respectively. Funds for the Blessed Virgin window are not yet complete, but have been contributed to by employees and friends of the School. The one in the door is the gift of Mrs. Anthony DeAngelis in memory of her husband who was a long-time employee at the institution.

The work was executed by the Pike Stained Glass Studios of Rochester, where the Don Bosco panel was designed. The rest of the panels were all made in Munich and were secured through the generous cooperation of Monsignor George Schmitt, of Holy Family Church, in Rochester.

Plaques of the descending Spirit and of the wheat and grapes which adorn the sanctuary, together with the painted inscriptions and other decorations, are the work of R. Attinasi and Sons, who also decorated the new sanctuary in the Assembly Hall.

The entire funds for the work and the furnishings in both the Chapel and the Hall have been contributed by interested friends and by the Mission units of the three Catholic Girls' High Schools in Rochester.

Our Lady of Mercy School is represented by the tabernacle in the Chapel. The figure of the Sacred Heart, which will soon dominate the sanctuary in the Hall, will be the first gift of the patients, themselves, purchased with the contents of their Lenten Mite Boxes.

Convention Told

Theatre in Need of Rescue

A keynote address by actress Peggy Wood and presentation of the first Religious Drama Award were highlights of a special convention of the National Catholic Theatre Conference held June 10-12 in Rochester's Hotel Manger.

Widely known for her portrayal of Mamma in the long-time TV series "I Remember Mamma," Miss Wood discussed

"theatre in a changing world," theme of the three-day conclave, at the opening session.

SHE URGED a rescue operation for the American theatre which would transform the "fabulous invalid" by ridding it of the cancer of commercialism.

In a historical review of the American theatre Miss Wood developed the thesis that commercialism and Puritanism had handicapped the development of native theatre.

She said that the nation's colleges might serve as a bridge to a community theatre "that belongs to the people and would eliminate commercialism."

N.C.T.C. president Rev. Gabriel Stapleton, S.D.S., presented the first Religious Drama Award to Sister Mary Marguerite, R.S.M., of Mercy College, Detroit, Mich., at a luncheon in her honor on June 11.

Renowned authority on the writings of Hrosvitha, 9th century nun-playwright, Sister Mary Marguerite is vice president of the National Catholic Theatre Conference.

The Order of St. Genesius, high N.C.T.C. honor, was conferred by the president on Sister Mary Pius, R.S.M., of Mercy High School, Rochester; Mother Marie Peter, R.S.H.M., Tarrytown, N.Y.; Mr. John T. Tuley, S.J., Cleveland, Ohio; Rev. Lawrence A. Griffin, O.M.I., Buffalo.

Rank of Commander in the Order of St. Genesius was bestowed on Robert Smith, convention chairman, who is news editor of the Courier Journal.

The convention drew directors and drama teachers in Catholic high schools, colleges, community and children's theatres from throughout the United States and Canada.

Besides business meetings, the convention program included tours of the Eastman Kodak Co. auditorium, the George Eastman House and Dryden Theatre, where delegates viewed a presentation of Laurence Olivier's film "Henry V."

Performances of "Princess Beauty" by Nazareth College and, "Peter Pan" by Blessed Sacrament School were also offered. The convention was especially dedicated to the field of Children's Theatre.

Omar K. Lerman, assistant to the producer of New York's Phoenix Theatre, was guest speaker at the closing banquet on June 12. He said that the Phoenix led the off-Broadway movement from its founding in 1953 to the present day affording audiences the classics, avant garde productions and works of new playwrights.

Father Stapleton noted that the conference shared the off-Broadway ideal of a theatre for all of the people instead of the limited group that patronize the glamorous Broadway houses.
