Rome Reds, Clergy Trouble

ROME — (NC) — The removal of a religious mosaic is the latest episode in a running 10-year battle between priests and communists, both tenants and communists, both tenants in the Falconieri Palace here. For years the Falconieri Palace has been shared by the Pontifical Ecclesiastical Hungarian Institute and the Hungarian Academy (now communist). From the time that the communist gained power in Hungary, the presence of the priests and seminarians has been a source of embarrassment to the communists. Only the law, which respects the ecclesiastical claims to use of the building, has prevented the communists from evicting them.

The first act of open conflict occurred 10 years ago when a 200-year-old picture of the Blessed Virgin which occupied a niche on the outside of the building was irreparably damaged with a knife during the night. Next the communist tenants of the building stopped the priests from using the main entrance to get to their quarters on the first floor. The authorities intervened in favor of the priests, but only after they had already opened a door for themselves in another part of the wall.

At the time of the Hungarian uprising in October, 1956, and the repression that followed, there were violent anti-communist demonstrations in Rome. The directors of the Hungarian Academy fled the Falconieri Palace in terror and took refuge in the Czechoslovak legation and the priests remained alone in the building. IT WAS DURING their absence that the rector of the pontifical institute commissioned the Vatican mosaic studio to make a mosaic of Our Lady of Hungary. This was fixed in the place of the niche where the ancient painting of Our Lady had been.

After an interval of 11 months the personnel of the academy returned to Falconieri Palace and since then had left the priests in peace. But recently the communists began retaking their part of the palace in preparation for the Olympic Games and the Hungarian communists whom they expect as guests. Apparently it occurred to the director of the academy that the mosaic of Our Lady of Hungary on the front of the building would embarrass his guests.

New Rector At McQuaid Jesuit, Fr. Barnett Ends 6 Year Term

The Rev. Robert J. Boyle, S.J., a member of the faculty at McQuaid Jesuit High School in Rochester since 1954, has been appointed rector of the school by the Very Rev. John B. Januszko, S.J., Superior General of the Society of Jesus. He succeeds the Rev. James R. Barnett, S.J., rector at McQuaid since 1954.

Father Barnett came to Rochester in 1953 to begin preparation for the new Catholic high school for boys. The following year he became McQuaid's first rector.

On the eve of his departure from Rochester he received Father Barnett's blessing from the Catholic people of this area who helped make the six-year-old Jesuit high school a reality. He referred to them as "unusually generous in every way."

Although an infant foundation, McQuaid already has made its mark in the community. Its importance to the educational development of the Rochester Diocese is a proven fact from results achieved. Father Barnett stated.

Father Boyle was born July 8, 1920, in Utica, N.Y. The son of William R. and Anna Mack Boyle, he attended St. Francis de Sales Grammar School and High School in Utica before entering the Society of Jesus at St. Andrew-on-Hudson, Foughkeeps, N.Y., in 1937.

He pursued the course in philosophy at Woodstock College, Woodstock, Maryland, where in 1943 he received his A.B. from Georgetown University. In 1944 he obtained his M.A. degree and his Licentiate in Philosophy at Woodstock College.

Boyle was instructor of Latin and English at St. Peter's Andrew-on-Hudson, Foughkeeps, New York, in 1953, as Assistant to the Master of Novices, Woodstock College, for three years. From 1953 to 1954 he was in charge of the school in Latin and English. He was ordained to the priesthood at Brookline Preparatory School, Brookline, N.Y., before his assignment to McQuaid, where he has been instructor in English, the Jesuit Tutorship in Religion and Reading, and Moderator of the General Course spiritual preparation for his program, and Moderator of priestly ministry.
