Elmira Agency Finds Homes For Children

difficult to understand. Even a small child feels, thinks and reacts to what happens to him.

All children, under such circumstances, are afraid of what is going to happen to them when removal from their own home is necessary.

ALL PARENTS realize their failures and successes each day in rearing children. The foster parents and the caseworker do too. Working together will be helpful to all concerned. The boarding check is mailed from the Catholic Family Service office each month.

Catholic couples desiring information about adoption or foster home care for children are invited to phone the Elmira Catholic Family Service, REgent 4-5128.

It is budgeted to cover the following items which the foster parent provides: food, rent, laundry and household incidentals; school lunches; toilet articles such as shampoo, Kleenex and toothpaste. In addition to the board payment, the agency can pay for certain other expenditures made by the foster parent.

The foster child will always attend the parish school unless his educational needs cannot be met there. In these instances, the school plan will be discussed with the child and foster parent by the caseworker.

A complete outfit of clothing is given the child when he is placed for the first time. Children are eligible for new clothing in the fall and in the spring, as is needed.

A physical examination is given the child at the time he is placed by the agency. Routine appointments in the various clinics are made as indicated.

ated by the health needs of the child.

Volunteers from the Ladies of Charity will call for the child to take them to the Catholic Family Service Clinic at St. Joseph's Hospital and to return them to the foster home. For the child who needs special care in the emotional area, the Child Guidance Clinic or the services of a private psychologist or psychiatrist will be used.

TO A CHILD of any age Foster home care can be confusing and upsetting. It means the leaving of family, home, playmates and taking on a new life with strangers.

The caseworker, when placing a child, will discuss with the foster parent the plans for the child's own parent visit. Sometimes foster parents and natural parents find the visiting situation difficult, and as a result to the child's move to another foster home or arrangements for the child to visit with his own family will be discussed by the caseworker.

The child may see his parents either in the foster home or be taken to his own home by his parents. These visits are on a scheduled basis and for a limited period of time and must be approved by the caseworker.

The way the foster parent understands and handles these visits will be important to them, the child, his parents and the agency. Only in unusual situations are parents denied the privilege of seeing their child.

A child must have a balance of work and play; restraint and freedom; and activity and rest. He needs both wholesome family life and community activity, as well as education and religious training. Being a part of the family is as important to a child as to an adult.

IN ALL THIS daily living, the foster parent cares for the child as they would for their own. They arrange for him to attend church as a member of their family group. They also will sign his report card and attend school functions and PTA meetings.

The caseworker will be interested to know that the child is attending Mass and receiving the Sacraments.

The agency does not ordinarily pay board for children after they have reached their eighth birthday. The plan for the foster home is worked out with the caseworker, the foster parent and the child.

Information the caseworker has shared with the foster parent about the child and his family is a confidence given to help them to understand and work with the child more easily. It is not to be shared with friends and relatives.

One of the most important and sometimes one of the most difficult jobs is to prepare a child to leave the foster home, to return to his own family, to be adopted, to move to another foster home or as a young adult, to make plans for himself.

But together with the caseworker, the foster parent can help the child to face the future with more confidence in himself and adults; with more ability to accept and give love; and with a greater feeling of trust in the future.

"WE ARE VERY proud of the fact that we are foster parents," said Mr. and Mrs. Stull. "We usually receive new home as each baby seems nicer than the one before," they continued.

"I ALWAYS HAVE a good cry when they have to go, but one consolation is they always bring another to replace the one leaving," said Mrs. Stull.

"We would like to adopt each one and have seriously considered doing just that. We recommend highly if there is space available in the home and if there are other children, that more couples become foster parents," said Mr. and Mrs. Stull. To quote Miss Mary E. Fitzgerald, executive director of the agency, "We need — we must have more Catholic Foster Homes."

Seattle Housewife

Seattle — (RNS) — What how to create rice mosaics, of drawing and oil and water color painting in elementary and high schools, and at the Carnegie Institute of Technology. She has done several paintings, mostly for her own pleasure or for her family and friends. Besides sacred subjects, her rice mosaics have included still-lives and studies of animals.

Her first step is to make a drawing on ordinary white paper, developing the color scheme with crayon or water colors. She then traces the design on plywood which she covers with household cement as a base for the rice.

She is now ready for the painstaking work of applying the rice grains, already soaked in food colorings contained in paper type containers. To accentuate white shades she uses rice soaked in white shoe polish. For large segments of a subject she applies sizable amounts of the rice by hand.

But for delicate, small details she uses an eyebrow brush. Sometimes she uses strands of copper wire to separate various sections of a figure.

The final step: six coatings of white varnish or a plastic finish to make the mosaic waterproof. Depending on the size, details or colors, a mosaic may take from two weeks to five months to complete.

At present, rice mosaics are only a hobby for Mrs. Kelly, but some day she thinks she may make it a career. Her artistic background includes study

School For Baby Sitters

Cleveland — (RNS) — More than 100 children are cared for each week in the parish nursery of Our Lady of Good Counsel Church (above) while their parents attend Sunday Masses. Officially known as "cadet supervisors," the young women who serve as sitters wear special uniforms and undergo a three-month training course sponsored by the Guardian Angel Guild, an affiliate of the parish women's society. Mrs. Mildred Genschke, R.N., an instructor, said the service, which also provides sitters for private homes, was a good way to spiritually form the girls for marriage.
