Movie Madonna

Madrid, Spain — (RNS) — Cast as the Virgin Mary, Irish actress Siobhan McKenna holds a child portraying the infant Jesus during the filming of a new Biblical epic in Madrid. The movie is Samuel Bronston's "King of Kings," an account of the life of Christ. The adult Jesus will be played by American actor Jeffrey Hunter.

Watkins Man Builds Shrine

Watkins Glen — A dream of many years will be fulfilled this week with the completion of a Shrine in the yard of the Joseph Chicone family. This Shrine to the Blessed Virgin Mary, entirely of native stone, has been constructed by Chicone, a local contractor, in his spare time this summer.

Eight feet high, and in the shape of a semicircular arch, the shrine features a waterfall dropping, from the base of the statue, over several stones into a pool in front of the shrine. By the use of a motor, the water recirculates constantly.

LANDSCAPING about the grotto enhances the beauty of the work, and lighting is planned in the future.

The Statue of Our Lady of Grace was installed on Sunday, July 31 and the entire shrine blessed by Rev. Benedict Ehmann, pastor of St. Mary's of the Lake church. All are welcome to visit the Shrine at any time.

Drum Corps Set To Compete

The New York State-Canadian Championship Drum Corps Contest at Aquinas Stadium, Mt. Read Blvd. on Saturday, August 6 will bring 10 senior corps and four junior corps in colorful competition beginning at 8 p.m.

SENIOR CORPS coming include the Geneva Appleknockers, five from various localities in Ontario, Montour Falls and the prize winning Grey Knights of Rochester.

Two Catholic junior corps to show are the De La Salle Drum and Bugle Corps of Toronto and St. Joseph's of Batavia.

The elimination contest will start at 4 p.m. Ticket reservations are being made through N.Y.-Canadian Contest, P.O. Box 1207, Rochester 4, N.Y.

Watching The Screen

So Sorry -- Boom!

By RAY SMITH

For 102 minutes you'll do an awful lot of traveling in China (actually the Arizona hinterlands) as Jimmy Stewart takes you on a ride on "THE MOUNTAIN ROAD" at the Loew's Theatre for ADULTS AND ADOLESCENTS.

The lack of understanding between people of different cultures and the use and abuse of power are the sobering themes of this war drama, laid in East China in 1944. Stewart, a major in charge of a eight man demolition squad is assigned to follow the retreating American forces, destroying all that may be of use to the Japanese; airstrips, bridges, and ammunition dumps. His eagerness to prove himself as a leader blunts his sympathy for the masses of miserable Chinese refugees clogging the mountain road on which he must operate.

LISA LU, the only feminine cast members, wins sympathy as she presents the Oriental viewpoint. As the widow of a Chinese general, for whom his squad is acting as escort, she tries to give Jimmy some understanding of her countrymen. Any viewer of this movie can't but stop to consider just how lucky, or better, blessed, we are when one sees such poverty and suffering. Yes, it's a movie but it has basis in fact. The anguish of the General's cute wife affects but does not influence our power-filled major. When Stewart sees American generosity and compassion rewarded with death, he uses his authority for a shocking retaliation which he later regrets.

A good supporting cast includes Glenn Corbett who is very good as a G.I. who has developed a love for China and gives his life in an act of mercy to its people. I think the female of the species will push Glenn's star right to the top in future pictures. Henry (Harry) Morgan, as the demolition team's sergeant, extends his talents far beyond his work on TV's "December Bride."

It may have been the ads on this film that gave me the idea that there would be more fighting with the enemy. There's a lot of noise as Jimmy blows up everything he can find, but outside of this, things move a little slow along the mountain road. If it wasn't for the name of Stewart heading the cast, I'll bet this would have been a second feature.

A MURDER melodrama with psychological character interplay can be found by ADULTS ONLY at the Palace Theatre with a stark cast headed by Lana Turner in "PORTRAIT IN BLACK." As the crowds will force the Palace to keep this a second week (I bet), may I leave further comment until next week as pickings will be little in the next few days as the Loew's has booked the "B" movie "Strangers When We Meet" following "Road" and the Paramount may hold the "B" "Psycho."

HORNELL — I wish they would keep the tremendous FAMILY "POLLYANNA" at the Majestic way after its ending date on Aug. 9th because after that one "B" movie (Strangers When We Meet) precedes another "B" (Psycho).

ELMIRA — Things don't look too swell in Elmira as the Elmira Theatre is copying Hornell in back-to-back "B" movies —"Strangers" and "Elmer Gantry." The Colonial has the "B" "The Rat Race" until Thursday when finally we have something to see in the action filled "PAY OR DIE" for ADULTS AND ADOLESCENTS. UGH, what a week.

Talk It Over

Magic Formula

By ANNE CULKIN

Dear Miss Culkin:

I am not a teen-ager, but the mother of three who are! How can I convince my children how important it is for them to be courteous. They are afraid of being thought different. I know there are many other mothers who have the same problem. If you know a magic formula, would you please write it? Thank you.

Mother of teen-agers

Dear Mother of Teen-Agers:

Magic formula? I sincerely believe there is one. It consists of one word — love! If a child is taught from the earliest age his responsibility is to love all people out of love of God, courtesy is assured. For never have I met a person who really loved and respected people who was not courteous. My suggestion would be to impress on your children the following points:

1. That courtesy is an obligation that in justice they owe to all people, not only a selected few.
2. That while it is true that there are many of their contemporaries who fail to extend the ordinary courtesies, this fact in no way excuses them from executing their own personal responsibility to others.

Dear Disgusted Teen-Age Lady:

So what's your problem! You agreed that boys don't want to marry "that type of girl" and apparently you are not that type of girl . . . no?

Dear Miss Culkin:

I have been invited to spend a week with relatives this summer. I do not know them too well as I have only seen them three times. They have a daughter my age. I want to do the correct thing. Do I buy my cousin a gift before I go and give it to her when I arrive or do I send her one when I get back home? I want to make a good impression. Please tell me what I should do?

M.G.S.

Dear M.G.S.:

A gift is a matter of choice. We are not wrong if we do or do not present one to a hostess. If you decide, however, to give your cousin a gift, you can either present it to her when you arrive at her home or mail it to her after you have returned to your own. But the rule for the thank-you note is quite different. This is a must and is to be sent within a few days after we have taken our departure from a home where we have been entertained.

You will make a good impression, M.G.S., if you remember to show enthusiasm and gratitude for what has been planned for you, keep your own room in order, offer to share household chores, and look pleasant even if bored.
