At Home With Trudy McNeil

A Peach Of A Dessert

Trudy McNeil is seen daily, Monday through Friday, on "Home Cooking" from 9:30-10 a.m. on WRUC-TV.

The summer harvest of gold-ripe peaches makes wonderful eating and gives much inspiration for the delectable courses in summer menus. Peaches are now on parade. A big crop is in prospect this summer. In fact the crop is so big that the U.S. Department of Agriculture has given peaches top billing on its list of Plentiful Foods for August.

This means that you will have ample chance to enjoy fresh peaches for a number of weeks to come at a reasonable price. Some of the first peaches to arrive will be — Hale and Red Havens, Elbertas and Golden Jubiles. Buy 'em by the pound, peck, bushel—eat them, freeze them, can them.

As a rule, fruit farmers harvest peaches three or four days before they reach maturity — that nice soft-ripe stage we all love. If they are picked when fully ripe, the soft fruit would be bruised and not in prime condition when it reached the market. Peaches ripen very well after being picked (they are sort of like bananas in this respect).

Peaches that will ripen well should be white or yellow, but not green even if the fruit has an attractive blush. Another tip worth knowing is that it pays to select peaches free of stems — this is just another sign of maturity.

PEACH STORAGE POINTS: Peaches are a fragile fruit and need special care to prevent bruising. They should be stored before they are stored at home. Peaches that show decay should be separated from those that are firm and sound to prevent further contamination. Peaches that are not ripe enough to eat will ripen at room temperature, away from sunlight. Once they are ripe you should refrigerate them in a covered container or plastic bag. If you do this you can keep them in prime condition for 3 to 5 days.

When your family comes to the table witted from the warm rays of the summer sun, an old-fashioned peach cobbler is sure to perk up appetites. You can make this easily by using a package of coffee cake mix. It assures a tender golden topping. This dessert is best served slightly warm while still fragrant with the aroma of juicy peaches and freshly baked cobbler. Top each serving with ice cream for an extra special summer dessert treat. The dessert will make 8 servings.

EASY PEACH COBBLER (Makes 8 servings)

Base: 6 c. sliced fresh peaches, 1 T. lemon juice, 1/2 c. sugar, 1 pkg. topping from each box of coffee cake mix.

Topping: One pkg. easy coffee cake mix, 1 egg, unbeaten, 1/4 c. milk, Granulated sugar.

Heat oven to 375 degrees. Combine peaches, lemon juice, sugar and topping in an 8-inch square pan or baking dish. Heat peach mixture in over 15 minutes. Put egg and milk in bowl of mix and prepare according to package directions. Square bag to empty batter evenly over hot peaches. Bake at 375 degrees for 30 to 35 minutes. Sprinkle top of cobbler with sugar as soon as it comes from oven. Serve warm with ice cream.

NECTARINES are non-peaches but peach trees produce them. They are a delicious fruit. Some people think that nectarines are a hybrid of the peach and plum, but such is not the case. The first nectarine, a fuzzless fruit with firm yellow or white flesh, grew naturally on a peach tree. Occasionally they still develop in this way, one peach tree in thousands will produce a limb of nectarines.

Most nectarines, however, have been developed through controlled breeding. They are produced on trees that look exactly like peach trees. Nectarines cost a little more than peaches and are certainly light fruits such as apricots and white cherries. Ascorbic acid comes in table and powder form. For peaches I prefer the powdered form and the amount to use is 1/4 t. powdered ascorbic acid to 1 1/2 c. sugar. This will be enough for 8 cups sliced peaches.

Another suggestion for helping fruit retain its color is to crumple a piece of cellophane or wax paper and place on top of fruit before closing package. I'll be on vacation for the next two weeks and will return with my column a September 2.

After hearing a message from the Capuchin Superior General, Father Clement Neubauser, O.F.M., Cap., of Milwaukee, Padre Pio returned to the messages and gifts that had been sent from several countries. Among the gifts was a gold-embroidered stole sent by a New York woman.

Padre Pio's 50th Jubilee

San Giovanni — (NC) — About 20,000 Catholics from all parts of the world gathered here to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the ordination of Padre Pio, Capuchin stigmatic.

Padre Pio received the demonstration with typical reserve, saying that he would rather stay out of the public view as much as possible.

Increased Aid To USO Asked Of U.S. Churches

New York — (RNS) — Protestant, Catholic, and Jewish experts on military chaplaincy services joined here in making an appeal for religious groups to increase their support of USO, a federation of voluntary agencies serving American military personnel around the world.

The USO, which currently operates 265 clubs and centers for servicemen in the United States and 21 such centers overseas, is seeking to expand its annual operating budget from $7,000,000 a year to $11,525,000.

IN ADDITION, the service agency is seeking $2,125,000 in the first capital funds campaign in its history. This will be for erection of new facilities or expanding existing ones in Alaska, Guam, Korea, Okinawa, the Philippines, and Puerto Rico.

Those urging religious groups to support the special USO appeal were: Dr. Marion J. Cre-

Papal Volunteers To Aid Missions

Boston — (RNS) — Richard Cardinal Cushing predicted that the call by Pope John XXIII for lay volunteers for Latin America would get an enthusiastic response in the United States.

The Boston archbishop, who is chairman of the Latin American Committee of the U.S. bishops, referred to the plan recently announced by the Vatican for enlisting laymen to help train Catholic leaders in Latin America.

"I think the call of the Holy See for lay volunteers for Latin America will catch the imagination of many fine young men and young women in the Catholic world, first of all in Latin America and as well in countries of Europe and North America," the cardinal said.

The new program calls for volunteers — both single persons and married couples — to be organized into teams of three to ten members. Each devoted to a particular form of technical or social assistance, the teams will train native leaders in the various Latin American dioceses.

Those who participate, to be known as "Papal Volunteers," will serve from two to five years, with the option of serving longer.

Endorsed by Pope John XXIII, the plan was formulated by the Pontifical Commission for Latin America. Marcello Cardinal Mimmi, commission president, issued the appeal for volunteers.

In the United States, the program will be carried out by the Latin American Bureau of the National Catholic Welfare Conference.

Father John J. Conidine, M.M., bureau director, said Catholic lay organizations and Catholic college societies will be asked to sponsor the program as soon as requests are received from Latin America for North American volunteers.

Need For Teachers

Bruges — (RNS) — Prominent civic and ecclesiastical dignitaries attended the opening here of the Fourth Congress of the World Union of Catholic Teachers which brought together delegates from the organization's 79 affiliated groups in 60 countries.

The keynote address was delivered by Cultural Affairs Minister Pierre Harmel on the congress theme, "The organization of teachers for the improvement of their professional life." He stressed the increasing need for teachers in countries throughout Asia and Africa, which was one of the topics to be taken up by various discussion groups during the congress, scheduled to continue for three days.
