

All Invited To Sunday Afternoon Ceremonies

High Schools Groundbreaking Rites

Workmen converged on site where new Bishop Kearney High School will be built following groundbreaking ceremonies there and in Town of Greece this Sunday.

Groundbreaking ceremonies will be held this Sunday afternoon, March 5, to signal start of construction on two new Catholic high schools in Monroe County.

Bishop Kearney will turn the sod at the two sites.

Diocesan officials invite the public to witness the historic launching of the five million dollar project.

The rite will begin at 3:30 p.m. where the Cardinal Mooney High School will soon rise — on Maiden Lane near Mt. Read Boulevard in the Town of Greece.

A motorcade will then journey to the site of the Bishop Kearney High School for a 4:30 p.m. groundbreaking ceremony there.

This site is on Kings Highway (North Goodman St. extension) near Ridge Road East, Irondequoit.

The Greece to Irondequoit motorcade will travel Mt. Read Boulevard to Ridge Road, across the Veterans Memorial Bridge, along Ridge Road to Kings Highway.

Contractors moved massive equipment onto the Kings Highway site this week to begin the vast construction program Monday morning.

Birthday For Two

Joanne, Rosary Program

Eleven year old Joanne Huck will lead the Family Rosary for Peace radio program over station WSAY Saturday at 7 p.m.

She and the program have their birthday together and her father has vivid memories of snow-slippery streets in 1950.

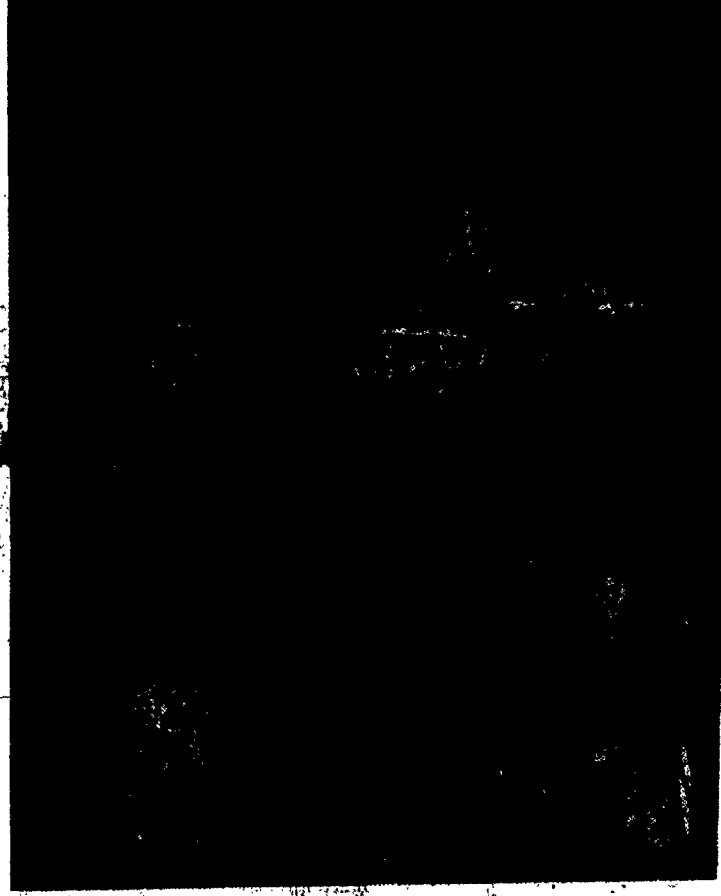

He did the carpentry work for the parish studio and still had finishing touches to complete when the first broadcast was made March 4.

He joined in recitation of the Rosary and then went on with his job — when the phone jangled with an urgent call.

Mr. and Mrs. Huck dashed to the hospital and Joanne was born the next day, March 5.

In the eleven years since, the program has been a spur to thousands of families to revive the practice of family prayer and has linked the Diocese in network programs of special devotions.

Father Joseph Cirrincone, pastor of St. Francis of Assisi Church, where the broadcast originates, is director of the program.

Joseph Huck coaches his eleven year old daughter Joanne for March 4 radio broadcast of the Family Rosary for Peace. Joanne and program both have their birthday this week.

No Tears For Missioner

Washington — (RNS) — In sincerity of the tears shed over ex-Congo Premier Patrice Lumumba by Communists and left-wingers around the world has been demonstrated by their total indifference to the equally cruel fate suffered by Father Renato Devos, a dedicated Catholic missionary, the Washington Evening Star said here.

In a lead editorial, the newspaper pointed out the people who have protested the loudest and wept and wailed synthetically in a screaming, riotous lament over Lumumba's death have voiced "not a single word either regretting or deploring the fate that befell the humble missionary."

"After all, who has ever heard of this servant of God, and why should a good atheist Marxist give him a second thought?" asked the newspaper.

"Well, for those who may have missed the story in the rush of the news, it should be reported that Father Devos has been murdered in the Congo, and in a most vile way. Wholly innocent of any conceivable connection with the Lumumba slaying, he has been sacrificed to the mob spirit of blindly unreasoning Lumumbists incited to violence by the Kremlin's venomous propaganda.

"Thus, while walking unoffendably and defenselessly along a street in a town called Bukavu, he has been done to death with unspeakable savagery —

No Worry For Pope

Cleveland — (NC) — Archbishop-designate John J. Krol, of Philadelphia will enter upon his new duties with the fatherly advice of Pope John XXIII ringing in his ears and soothing his fears.

He quoted the Pope telling him: "People often ask me how I can be so happy and serene in my responsibility. Well, I do it by accepting the will of God. I have no concern or worry. If God calls me tomorrow, I am happy too."

Bishop Krol said he had a "truly paternal talk" with the Pope. He told the Pope that he felt inadequate to be an archbishop. But the Pontiff smiled and said: "Do not worry. If God gives us the responsibility, He also will give us the grace to do the job."

first beaten unmercifully, then his ears cut off, and, finally, in a kind of corporal work of mercy, beheaded.

"Yet no voice has been raised behind the Iron Curtain to protest this atrocity," observed the newspaper, "and no one has organized mobs to mourn the cruel passing of this man."

The Washington Star added that although some would hold that Father Devos was "little more than a cipher in the history of our times," he is in a way "a peculiar part of that history."

"Surely there are some among his fellow men who must remember him, and pray for him, and weep silently for him, and cry to heaven for an end to such evil as has snuffed out his good life so atrociously," the newspaper declared.

Radio Mass This Sunday

High Mass will be broadcast from new St. Ambrose Church by radio station WHAM this Sunday, March 5, 11 a.m. to noon.

Celebrant of the Mass will be Rev. Joseph Dailey and the sermon will be given by Rev. Daniel Wheeland.

Besides Lenten devotions, parish churches will also mark today as the First Friday of the month and tomorrow, the First Saturday, days of devotion to honor the Sacred Heart of Jesus and the Immaculate Heart of Mary.

Mounting Opposition Faces School Aid Plan

'Breakthrough' Said Urgent

Los Angeles — (RNS) — A "massive and dramatic" breakthrough is needed in American higher education, but it cannot be accomplished without federal aid, a Catholic university head, said here.

Father Paul C. Reinert, S.J., president of St. Louis (Mo.) University, spoke at the meeting of the Western College Association. He said an additional $2.7 billion will be needed from the government if American higher education is to accommodate the anticipated doubled enrollment by 1970, and at the same time attain new levels of excellence.

"The problem is national," Father Reinert declared. "No matter how many diverse elements of our society join in support of higher education, excellence in education is a problem for the nation as a whole, and so for the national government."

Father Reinert said voluntary and local support for higher education remains the ideal and should still be the major source of support. But some Americans will not do their share in supporting the schools. The national interest therefore "demands some responsibility on the part of organized government," he added.

"From this responsibility the welfare of society the federal government has no escape," he said.

THE QUESTION at issue is what kind of role the federal government should play in higher education, Father Reinert stressed. The question is not whether the government should have a role, he added. "The latter question was answered affirmatively in the 19th century and was never seriously reopened," he observed.

Father Reinert said he agreed with President David Henry of the University of Illinois, who said private institutions must receive some form of public support "if we are going to maintain a first-rate system of higher education, widely accessible to all students."

He recommended a program of matching grants, patterned after the existing Hill-Burton Act which provides assistance to medical hospitals.

Federal Loans Proposed To Help Private Schools

President Kennedy's controversial aid-to-education proposal came to the Congressional arena this week to face a hazardous test to survive.

Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon, picked to launch the plan in the Senate, admitted he disagreed with its blunt blackout of aid to pupils in parochial schools.

He said he will renew his effort—defeated last year 49 to 37—to aid private schools through construction loans.

The President's college scholarship plan, similar to Governor Rockefeller's program in New York State, will be sent to Congress at a later date, Washington spokesmen said. Students will be aided whether they attend public or private colleges, President Kennedy told Congressmen.

His college aid proposals stand a better chance of winning Congressional approval.

In his press conference Wednesday, the President repeated his conviction the Constitution prevents any government help to pupils in private grade schools or private high schools.

Strong opposition against him on this score mounted as Cardinal Cushing of Boston added his protest that religion becomes a "handicap" according to the Kennedy plan.

The Boston prelate issued a 40-page pastoral letter given the 1,600,000 Catholics in the President's home diocese. Cardinal Cushing said if Congress puts the Kennedy plan into law it will mean "democracy has failed in its claim of equal rights for all its citizens."

New York's Cardinal Spellman, in a statement read in the 400 churches of his archdiocese, assailed the federal aid plan. He bluntly charged the plan was "unfair."

SENATOR MORSE said low cost loans to private schools would avoid the Constitutional ban of outright grants to these schools. In a speech in the Senate after the President's program was introduced, he said private schools in America are providing "a very important service" to the nation.

"If anyone has any question about this, let us suppose it were decided today to close every private elementary and secondary school in America and the children now attending these schools appeared tomorrow at the public schools," the Oregon Senator stated.

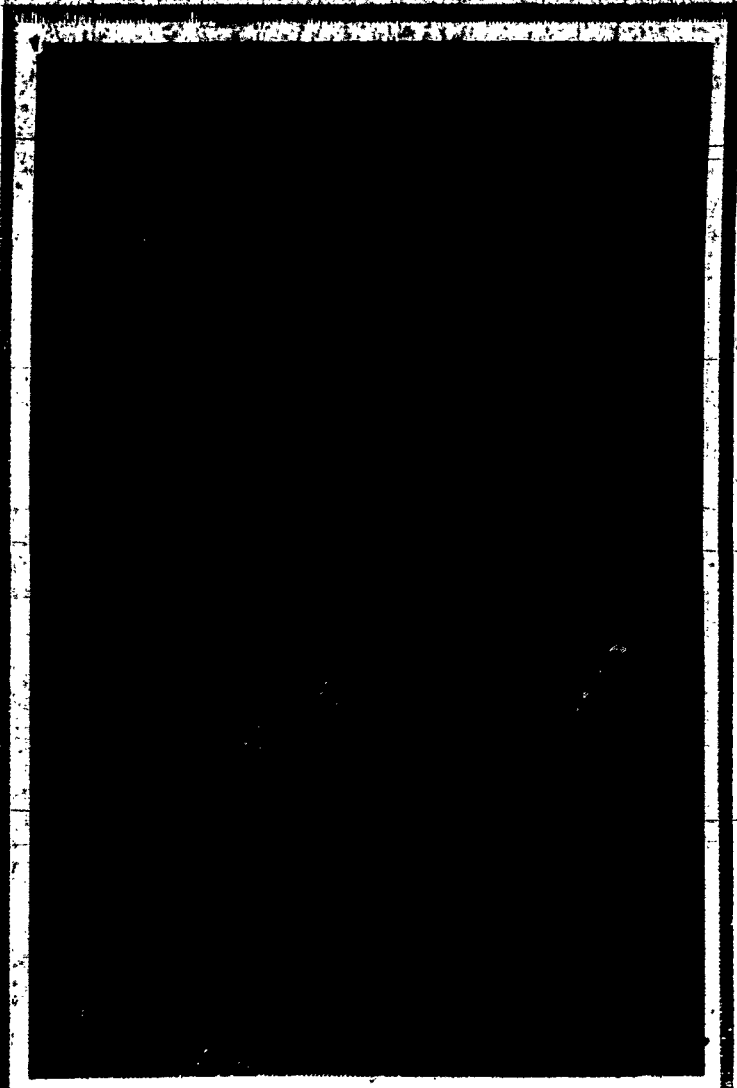

"Then I think that the taxpayers of this country, probably for the first time, would have a clear understanding of the public service which is rendered the taxpayers by the private schools."

He also reminded the Senate that "too often we lose sight of the beneficiaries of the program we seek to enact—the children themselves."

"I am interested in making certain that the child who goes to private school also has the advantage of these minimum standards of education," said the Senator, adding, "We do not serve the cause of education by pursuing a discriminatory policy against the child in a private school."

Senator Morse said he believes in the doctrine of Church-State separation and "did not teach that doctrine for years in law school only to walk out on it when I entered politics."

"The doctrine has nothing to do with a loan program, so far as the Constitution is concerned," he declared, stating,

Devotions For Lent

A uniquely Catholic custom is "making the stations."

The traditional Friday evening Lenten devotion is a dramatic following of the Saviour on his journey to crucifixion.

No specific prayers are designated by the Church but two sets of prayers—one by St. Francis of Assisi and the other by St. Alphonsus Liguori—are in widest use.

To gain the many indulgences of the devotion, a person must have contrition for sin and meditate on the sufferings of our Lord.

The fourteen scenes of the Saviour's painful way to Golgotha enable Christians around the world to take part in rites once limited to the city of Jerusalem.

When devoutly made, the stations help us to realize the infinite love and mercy God has for us.
