Visual Mass Listed At St. Anne's

Actions and prayers used in the Mass will be explained by visual aid on Tuesday, May 9th, in St. Anne's Parish. "A Demonstration of the Mass" to which all are invited will begin at 7:15 p.m. in St. Anne's Room, 1600 Mt. Hope Ave.

AN ALTAR facing the people will be erected in the hall. A priest will don the vestments used in a Mass and explain their significance.

The priest will proceed through the recitation of prayers and ceremonies of a Mass. At the same time the specific actions of the "celebrant" will be explained by means of a tape recorder.

A question period will follow the 40 minute program. Msgr. Wm. J. Naughton, pastor, said that this visual means of explanation has proved to be very successful in learning the true meaning of the Mass. He invites all to attend. Non-Catholics as well as Catholics.

Beauty Contests

By ANNE CULKIN

Dear Miss Culklin: Would you tell me what you think about girls entering beauty contests? It seems that there are many arguments about this. I'd like to get your opinion.

Dear Virginia: While an occasional beauty contest may publicize its concern for the intellect, breeding and charm of the entries, the bathing suit parade, nevertheless, continues. The girls' scantily clad bodies are measured and gaped at much as if the affair were a cattle auction.

To me, this aspect of the beauty contest is revolting—a shoddy and vulgar display which challenges modesty, caters to vanity and, in some instances, willfully creates scandal.

The Church, it is true, has no teaching on beauty contests as such; however, the moral principles which she champions could easily be applied to a particular contest which flouted those principles. In the last few years, several American bishops have done this.

ing your approval, you will want to help her. Neither you nor she gain anything in this situation by a so-called "white lie." This does not mean, of course, that you tell her "flattery" that a particular dress is unattractive. Rather you say something to this effect: "It's a lovely dress but honestly I believe that this or that would be much more attractive on you." The normal response to this is not anger but rather the question, "why?" You can take it from there.

I have a close friend who has been in my class since the first grade and I'm very fond of her. But lately she's always complaining. I don't please her and none of her other friends do either. Every boy she dates is all wrong and the places they take her are impossible. What can you do when a girl gets like this?

It is true that the chronic complainer makes poor company and this is especially the case when, as with your friend, the complaints are trivial bickering. You have known children who have enjoyed wearing band-aids because of the attentive sympathy they provoke. Possibly your friend voices her complaints for the same reason.

You can't be completely oblivious to her tales of woe. How actually which of these styles ever, don't encourage her to be the more formal, but rather recite play-by-play descriptions which of them would be more of her misfortunes. Rather be appropriate for a teenage girl, quick to point out the bright side of people and places. Appear in evening gowns for fear surprised when she has women and girls of all ages, failed to notice these and would certainly be more suitable for you. Moreover, the flared skirt is one style that has retained its popularity over the years.

I have a girl friend that I really like very much, and I wouldn't want to hurt her feelings for the world. But she doesn't have good taste in clothes. Everytime she buys a new dress she asks me if I like it and really I don't very often. Still I hate to hurt her feelings. What should I do in cases like this, Miss Sulkin.

There's quite an argument in my crowd as to how much more should wear to school. I'd like to have your opinion on this.

Very little! Settle for lipstick and add powder if you need it.

The BISHOP warned particularly against the Connolly Association, which has its headquarters in England. This group is named after James Connolly, one of the leaders of the Easter Insurrection of 1916. Although an ardent Socialist, Connolly was reconciled to the Catholic Church before his execution along with other leaders of the uprising.

Bishop Lucey said the Connolly Association published a monthly journal called the Irish Democrat, which was hawked around wherever the Irish gathered in any numbers, even at church entrances on Sundays.

Students Set For Panel

Two journalists of Our Lady of Mercy High School will be panel speakers at Press Day at St. Bonaventure University, Ascension Thursday, May 11. Mary Lou Schrot and Judy Otto, co-editors of the Mercedes, literary magazine, have as their topic, "Writing the Kind of Fiction High School Students Like."

Taking place annually, Press Day this year will feature as its guest speaker, Pierre Salinger, press secretary to President Kennedy.

Press Day features workshops and discussion groups to assist the student journalist. A luncheon at noon is followed by an awards assembly and later a dance and reception for delegates at the Country Club across from the university.

Ten seniors and several faculty members plan to attend Press Day. Senior delegates are Quill editors Mary Ann Binsack and Nancy McHugh and staff members Donna Lechleter, Bette Kellock, Kathy Cusker, Pat Goyette, Rosalie Sassano, and Peggy Simmons.
