Space Flight Called OK For Catholic

Webster Groves, Mo.—(NC)—A Catholic acting with the intention of aiding his country could take part in an experimental space flight "even if death seemed certain," a theologian said here.

Father Nicholas Persich, C.M., rector of Kenrick Seminary, said there was no real moral problem involved in the recent space flight of Navy Comdr. Alan B. Shepard, Jr.

HE EXPLAINED that the intention of a person making a flight into space is the key factor as far as morality is concerned.

"One could not make the flight for the intention of committing suicide," Father Persich stated. "But he could make the flight for the intention of advancing scientific knowledge, so that his country could be adequately defended. And he could do so even if death seemed certain."

The Vincentian priest said it is difficult to separate space flights from questions of national defense. Consequently, even seriously dangerous flights would be morally justified, he stated, "provided the flyer's motive was to aid his country, not to kill himself."

Each His Own Tyrant

By SISTER MARGARET TERESA
Nazareth College

Each His Own Tyrant, by Wingfield Hope. Sheed '61. 245 pp. $3.50.

The author of this curious career as a secretary in "big case-book — two novels for the 'business,' a power behind the price of one — has devoted a throne; the other propelling her lifetime to smoothing out her own wave of satisfying piety, man frictions by shedding light into the convent. (Alas, poor on them. An earlier work Life convent!) Alice causes much Together, aired the troubles of trouble in both vocations; both the modern young couple so present an interesting chaos, kindly and yet so keenly that in both situations, when she it quickly became a classic in its well "out" dismissed, then the field. This latest study is at last she is open to a cure. even more likely to win a hearing — it's good story-telling.

THE ALICE OF the first time and hauled him off story, unloved in her childhood-damp ground at the climax of because an unthinking and his own birthday party, is a heartless mother revolved their more sympathetic one. Anybody world around a younger and could be the badgered Hugh, prettier child, survives in her anybody could be his loving, mother frozen heartbreak in the mother, nobody is pathological the soul of the grown woman — nobody would suspect, either, and with a catastrophic result that Hugh would begin to wreck little Alice wrecks every opportunity of the clever, good because he too had a tyrant looking young woman by demanding what she had lost in youth.

The demanding is uncontrollable, ugly, ruins each chance of happy human contact, yet it is unconscious, and the young woman reads the whole world as hostile. She cannot be cured until she understands the terrible burden of that tyrant-child within her.

For good measure, Wingfield Hope makes two stories out of not only sweeten the world the same Alice (but there is somewhat but redirect — or also another story, of the boy at least magnify — our person-Hugh) one heading her into a history!

Court Won't Rule On Tuition Case

Washington—(NC)—The U.S. Supreme Court has refused to review a lower court's ruling that it is unconstitutional to use public funds to pay tuition of students in church schools.

The court let stand a ruling by the Vermont state Supreme Court that the practice is unconstitutional. The U.S. high court did not comment on its action.

In refusing to review the case, the Supreme Court turned down requests from both sides. Both the petitioners and the respondent had asked the court for a ruling.

THE CASE originated in South Burlington, Vt., where the school district had been paying tuition for students attending high schools, including church-run ones, outside the district.

The South Burlington school district had no public high school of its own, and under a 1915 state law, school districts in these circumstances could pay the costs of students who had to go to school elsewhere.

The controversy began when a Protestant taxpayer filed suit against the school board, charging that his tax money was being used in an unconstitutional manner to support sectarian education.

FIVE OTHER taxpayers — three of them parents of children whose tuition at a Catholic school was being paid by the school district — entered the case as intervenors on the requesting that the high court consider the case.

The Court of Chancery of Chittenden County, Vt., held the tuition payment system to be unconstitutional on Feb. 19, 1960. On appeal the Vermont Supreme Court upheld this ruling last January. Both based their decisions on the First Amendment's ban on an "establishment of religion."

THE STATE high court's ruling was appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court by the five taxpayers, but not by the school board.

They argued that the education of children is such a valid public welfare purpose.

Garrison—(NC)—Father Angelus Delahunt, S.A., superior general of the Franciscan Friars of the Atonement, dedicated a new annex to the Friars' St. Christopher's Inn for homeless men here.

THE TWO-STORY brick building is called Matt Talbot Hall in honor of the Irish working man and one-time alcoholic who died in 1925 and is now being considered for canonization for his great penance in later life.

The annex will be reception center of the 50-year-old shelter which can care for 200 men at a time.

Gets Study Grant
Chicago—(NC)—A research grant of $40,176 has been received by Dr. Alexander P. Remenick, a Loyola University faculty member for a study of energy metabolism in schizophrenic patients.
