Pimples

By ANNE CULKIN

Dear Miss Culklin: If you squeeze a pimple, will it leave a mark?

S. W.

I don't know if you are male or female, but, really, it makes no difference. The answer to both sexes is yes! So... hands off... if you don't want to advertise the fact years from now that you had a skin condition when you were a younger person.

Dear Miss Culklin: My girl thinks it is not nice for me to kiss her on the dance floor. Do you think there is anything wrong about it? We'll both be looking for your answer.

Not a Romeo

If you like this girl well enough to want to kiss her, then like her enough not to want to cheat her. And because a girl a boy does if he becomes too amorous on the dance floor, or for that matter, in any public setting, it would be well, too, for you to remember that if you want to appear to others as a gentleman, your affection will be expressed without an audience. Incidentally, do you by chance know any men who are cadets at West Point? Ask any one of them how many demerits they receive if at any time they display affection in public. It's referred to as P.D.A. at the point. And the demerits are forthcoming even though the young man is engaged to the girl and hasn't seen her for a year! Happy Dancing.

Dear Miss Culklin: When you write to a girl who is sixteen years old, do you put Miss on the envelope?

Seventeen

Dear Seventeen: Yes. A girl can be addressed as Miss from the time she is six years old.

Dear Miss Culklin: How do you go about changing your personality? There is so much that is wrong about me that I'm disgusted with myself. I'm overweight, and I just stay in my room and guess I am mean with my family temper. Everyone in the house is mad at me. I pretend, Miss Culklin, that I don't care, but I do. I would like to change everything about me, but I don't know how to begin. Could you help me? I'm not signing my right name but if you answer in the paper I'll read it.

Angela

Dear Angela: I recall one time hearing a very practical sermon concerning venial sins. The priest suggested making a list of all that we were guilty of and then trying to rid ourselves of them one at a time. You began your list of personality defects in your letter. Why not keep adding to this list until it gives you a clear picture of yourself. Then, Angela, your first effort to eliminate the negative should be to learn how to control your temper. Each time you are tempted to say the unkind word, don't say it until you first ask yourself, "do I really want to say it — what would be gained by it if I did." Concentrate on your temper until you have learned to control it. Next item on your list that needs changing most in the meantime, don't give too much thought to your weight. You're, no doubt, eating to excess because of your unhappiness. Once you have succeeded in overcoming the other faults, ask a doctor about a good diet. You will like the new you and so will your family. Best to you, Angela.

Dear Miss Culklin: I've known a boy — let's call him Jim — since we were in elementary school. He's a good looking boy, a real athlete, makes friends easily and is full of fun. The trouble is he has too many friends as fast as he makes them because he always tries to act like a wise guy. But I know he doesn't mean it and if I cut these things out he could be very popular. I like him.

New Lighting For St. Peter's

Vatican City — (NC) — On the feast of St. Peter, June 29, a new lighting system will be inaugurated in St. Peter's basilica.

At the pull of a master switch 2,000 kilowatts of electrical current will flash through 125 miles of main-line cable and flood the basilica erected over the tomb of the Prince of the Apostles with such brilliance that has not lighted its interior in its 400-year history. EVER SINCE Pope Julius II (1503-1513) decided to rebuild the basilica over St. Peter's tomb, the greatest artists and the finest materials have gone into its construction and constant maintenance. The masters who contributed to its construction and decoration read like a catalogue of the great artists, sculptors, and architects of the centuries: Bramante, Michelangelo, Raphael, Bernini, Sangallo, Maderna, Valadier, Giotto and Canova, just to name a few.

But for centuries many of the mosaics, sculptures and gilded stuccos have gone almost unappreciated. Hundreds of feet high from the floor in dimly lighted domes and vaultings, they have hardly been seen by the countless thousands who have come to marvel at the greatest temple ever built in God's honor.

Candles, torches and oil lamps were, of course, the illumination at the beginning. The exterior of the basilica, the great dome, the two lesser domes and the facade, were illuminated with oil lamps for the first time in 1855 for the election of Pope Alexander VII (1655-1667). Up until 1870 this spectacle was repeated, not only for the election of a new pope, but annually on the evening of Easter and the feast of St. Peter and Paul. After that date the days of canonization and special events were added.

The ILLUMINATION of the exterior was a marvel practiced, up until recent date, at the Vatican's versatile handyman, would swing on ropes from the top of the dome and lower themselves little by little as 4,400 lanterns were lighted to outline the domes and facade. As the clock in St. Peter's struck the first hour of night they would begin and would expertly complete the task within a half hour. This was done for the last time on occasion of the canonization of St. Pius X in 1954.

Since the canonization of St. Pius X the domes and facade have been illuminated by floodlights on festive occasions. But those who remember the strings

Youth Reform

Clergy, Courts Join Forces

New York — (NC) — The Archdiocese of New York has formed a working agreement with Manhattan courts to cooperate on the reform of youthful offenders.

Nine parish priests from neighborhoods with a high incidence of delinquency met in a Special Sessions courtroom (May 16) with probation officers with whom they will work.

SIMON SHUTE, acting chief probation officer, said this is the first formal arrangement his department has had with a religious body. If the experiment is successful, he said, it will be extended to other boroughs and to other faiths. Under the agreement, whenever a Catholic youth is arrested in Manhattan, his parish priest's name will appear in the official record. The priest will then be notified and will receive information in the court files.

Discussing the project with the priests, Chief Justice John M. Murtagh said: "Delinquency is an enigma in all disciplines. Miracles are not to be expected, yet this is something I regard as of great importance. In a large measure the delinquent is, we suspect, one who has not had the affection and guidance normal to all human beings. The clergy is in a position to supply these needs.

"You will have a real opportunity when a youth is spiritually motivated, though all too many have never been so. My faith in God sustain you against almost impossible odds. My fervent hope is that this is just the beginning."
