

High School Graduates

A Job For Laymen

tives have had a hand in their instruction.

Each has acquired a theology library at his own expense ($240 to $600). Sample titles: Delubac's "The Discovery of God," Danielou's "The Bible and the Liturgy," Hasseveldt's "The Church: A Divine Mystery," Sheed's "Theology and Sanity," Lewis' "Miracles." They are out about $6,000 each in sacrificed income.

WHY HAVE they done it?

Said O'Brien: "I woke up one day and discovered I didn't want to be in the insurance business the rest of my life. I felt I'd be more willing to knock myself out for something personally more satisfying."

Fresques: "I feel that laymen have a real vital role to play in the Church, more than just passing the collection basket on Sunday."

Randol: "Sure I want to earn a good living, but I want integrity — 24 hours a day."

Grace: "I saw an opportunity to make life's goals more real, more vivid, not only for great numbers of people but for myself as well."

The lay theologians — "inquiry director" will be their parish title — will give fully prepared, professional lectures using audiovisual aids. They will work within the parish, do no street-preaching, engage in no debates, take on only such luncheon talks as they feel they're time for.

They will move out equipped with sociological surveys on their respective parishes, compiled by a Jesuit priest for his doctoral dissertation.

The parishes: St. Matthew's, St. Vincent de Paul's, St. Simon and Jude's, Our Lady of Perpetual Help, St. Thomas, and St. Theresa's, all in Phoenix; St. Ambrose and Our Mother of Sorrows, Tucson; St. Theresa's and Our Lady of Victories, Fresno; St. Mary's and St. Ignatius, Sacramento.

For next fall's course at the Institute Father Zimmers already has four recruits, but he will travel to interview anyone who writes him. He checks out candidates on intellectual ability, personality, career accomplishments, dedication to and understanding of their faith — especially as it must be lived and exemplified in an era of greater lay integration into the Church.

He anticipates no difficulty lining up qualified men to meet the institute's promised turnout of 18 inquiry directors a year for the Tucson, Monterey-Fresno, and Sacramento dioceses. And he's negotiating with Spokane and Reno.

The institute implements Father Zimmers' conviction that 20th-century Catholicism can't be satisfied with 16th-century methods, that "the Mystical Body today must be alive from top to bottom, full of joy, full of commitment to Christ."

He had only one drop out from the pioneer class. A seventh member, a 34-year-old accountant, after finishing the course decided to enter the Jesuit novitiate.

Names of senior students scheduled to be graduated from ten high schools of the Rochester Diocese are as follows. Details of each graduation rite begin on page one of this issue.
