At Our House® . . . Glorious Fourth

By MARY TINLEY DALY

Dear Mrs. Daly:— Some years ago, you wrote about how your family spent the Fourth of July. At the time, my own children were just babies and couldn't have cared less. Now, I wish I had saved that column. As I recall, you mentioned having a red-white-and-blue dessert? Personally, I don't care for blue food, but would you repeat it? Other readers, I believe, also would be interested.

Mrs. M. J. McM. Dear Mrs. McM.: That long-ago printed column has yellowed and crumbled with age, but the Fourth-of-July family traditions are still vivid. Customs vary, of course, from year to year depending on the ages of the children, their interests — and the weather! Some of the traditions have been carried into the new homes established by our children, and very much improved upon.

Essentially, the idea is to celebrate this as a very special day, the birthday of our country, when those intrepid patriots of the Continental Congress on July 4, 1776 adopted the Declaration of Independence.

This is a wonderful day to "fly the flag," even more significant than flying it on other holidays. Even small children can grasp the fact that the red and white stripes signify the 13 original colonies and the 50 stars represent the 50 sovereign states, varying in climate, population and customs all the way from Alaska to Hawaii — all joined together as the United States of America.

A COPY of the Declaration, complete with the interesting signatures, can be found in almost any American history book. It stirs children's imaginations, we have found. We learned, too, that children should simply be exposed to this, Mrs. McM., rather than have it crammed down their throats as a history lesson. If they like the idea, they will ask questions. If not, wait a while. There will be other "Fourth's." Main thing is to encourage a subconscious appreciation of the freedom this signifies, a realization of what freedom means and how precious it is in this day of world-wide shrinking freedom.

As to family customs: It is a fun-day, with the red-white-and-blue motif woven through. It may be the wearing of white Bermuda shorts, red shirt and

Talk It Over

Poise

By ANNE CULKIN

Dear Miss Culklin:— How would you sit in a desk comfortably? Madge:—

Don't sit "in" the desk, my dear, it is bound to cramp you. Seriously, sitting at a desk is other a matter of attractive and comfortable posture. Sit with your hips well back and let your spine parallel the rear of the chair.

Avoid mannerisms such as turning the soles of the feet inward, collapsing your head on the palms of hand, etc. Neither slump nor assume a military pose — just sit up and look pretty!

Dear Miss Culklin:— The other evening a friend of mine entertained our club at her home. Her mother came in the living room for part of the evening and while she was there she filed her nails. I wondered what she was doing. She was unsung.

Dear Miss Culklin:— I am a senior at a public school and we have had much controversy about this question: Is it appropriate to bow your head while a protestant minister is giving benediction (this is in regard to commencement and baccalaureate programs, etc.)? Some people say how your head out of respect.

Others say you are taking part in their religious service. One person put it like this: "Look straight ahead, if everyone is doing what he's supposed to be doing, no one will notice what you are doing." B.A.

Dear Miss Culklin:— Of course it's appropriate to bow your head — and, if you wish, to do so every time you hear a prayer or hear the name of God in prayer. God is the Supreme Being in Whom we believe and we show reverence to Him at every opportunity.

Dear Miss Culklin:— Why do some boys wear their hair long and refuse to get a haircut. Tell them in your column sometime that they look like bums, will you.

Dear Mary Jane:— You've already told them. Now will you answer this one for me? Why do some girls wear so much make-up that they look like burlesque queens and refuse to accept the fact that they do?

Dear Miss Culklin:— If a person is talking to you and says something that reminds you of something else that you do it politely? I heard some people say that it is wrong and others say it is the way you do it. The reason I do it is that if I don't, I forget what I wanted to say.

Dear Miss Culklin:— Better that you forget what you wanted to say, than to display bad manners — and that's exactly what you do, Judy, when you interrupt a person who is speaking. Some people feel that as long as they say "I'm sorry to interrupt you," it excuses them. It doesn't!

There are exceptions, however, to the rule. For instance, Judy, supposing you were going to be late for class or miss a bus; then you would have a good reason for interrupting the person who is speaking, wouldn't you?

Couple Marks Silver Jubilee

Mr. and Mrs. Harmon M. Bulley of 225 Delamaine Dr. celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary Mass in St. Andrew's Church, Friday, June 23. Their daughter, Melinda, was the flower girl. Rt. Rev. Msgr. George Eckl gave the blessing and offered the Mass.

Fathers E. Charles Bauer, Michael Volpe and William J. Brien were in the sanctuary. Miss Mary Ann Oliver sang "Ave Maria" and "Panis Angelicus." Ushers were Ronald and Wayne Pappert.

Dinner was held at the Country House, East Rochester, for relatives and friends.

Mercian's Poems To Be Published
